Japan Drives Chinese West In Campaign On Nanking

Defenders Give Up All Hope of Peace

5 Americans, Safe, Stay to Aid Wounded in Bombed Hospital.

By the Associated Press

Shanghai (Saturday), November 13.—On new battlefields, 20 or more miles west of Shanghai, the Chinese-Japanese war raged on today with all signs pointing toward an early Japanese drive on Nanking, capital of the Chinese nation.

It had become a rapidly shifting war of movement, covering hundreds of square miles.

After three months of terrific pounding, Shanghai itself knew peace once more. With the Japanese in complete possession of this metropolitan area, silence reigned, although great fires still burned in Pootung and Nantao.

Meanwhile, at Wusih, 80 miles northwest of Shanghai, five Americans escaped death when Japanese planes bombed the American Church Mission Hospital.

Two Chinese members of the staff were killed and seven were injured. The buildings bombed were said to have displayed United States flags.

Despite partial destruction of the institution, the five Americans said they would stay to care for Chinese wounded who crowded the hospital.

The hospital is directed by a veteran missionary, Dr. Claude Lee, of Charlottesville, Va., assisted by Dr. John Roberts, of Richmond, Va., the Rev. E. R. Dyer, of Dallas, Tex., and the nurses, Laura Lenhart and Gertrude Seltzer, of New York City.

Japan's refusal to co-operate with the Brussels conference's search for peace was received by Chinese as notice the war would go on. In Nanking a government spokesman commented:

Defenders Escape Underground.

The final episode of 92 days of bloody fighting within and around this great city came during a downpour late yesterday when Japanese bluejackets shouting "Banzai!" ran their rising sun flag up over a warehouse on the Nantao waterfront, scene of the last forlorn-hope Chinese stand.

The few defenders, it was reported, had withdrawn by a subterranean passage and reached the safety of internment in the nearby French concession.

Foreign experts estimated 400,000 Chinese and 200,000 Japanese were in the armies fighting, retreating and maneuvering west of here. The Japanese reported the capture of Kiating, 18 miles to the northwest.

The Chinese, unable to withstand longer the terrific pounding of Japan's modern weapons or maneuvered out of position by lightning Japanese moves, were retreating steadily toward their "Hindenburg line," roughly 30 miles west of the Japanese front and some 50 miles from Shanghai. Nanking is 125 to 150 miles beyond that line.

American missionaries at Soochow sent through Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson at Nanking an appeal to the Japanese command to spare Soochow, known to the Chinese for 2,000 years as "paradise under heaven."

Estimates of military casualties at Shanghai ran as high as 100,000 killed and wounded for both armies. Thousands of noncombatants had been killed by airbombs and shells, still more wounded. More than 1,000,000 Chinese had been made destitute refugees.

3 Men Confess To Kidnaping Ex-Dry Leader

West Virginia Cleric Flees After 11 Days; $50,000 Sought by Trio.

Federal agents and a West Virginia sheriff last night announced capture of three men who confessed the $50,000 kidnaping of Dr. James I. Seder, 79, Huntington, W. Va., evangelist and former dry leader.

Dr. Seder was found dazed and exhausted Thursday after he had been missing 11 days.

First to be arrested, according to F. B. I. Director J. Edgard Hoover, was Arnett A. Booth, 46, who was charged with attempted extortion after he confessed writing a ransom letter. He implicated John Travis, 24, alias James Winsfield, and Orville Atkins, 24.

Booth was arrested by Federal agents and Huntington police the day Dr. Seder was found, and Travis was picked up 18 hours later, both in Huntington. Travis' arrest was made by Federal agents led by R. E. Vetterli, of the New York office.

Third Seized in Kentucky.

Atkins was taken into custody late yesterday afternoon near Canada, Ky., it was announced by Sheriff W. E. Burchette, of Williamson, W. Va., who said the arrest was made by himself, a deputy and State Trooper W. E. Kelly.

Atkins, he said, admitted taking part in the kidnaping. The sheriff said Atkins made no resistance when he was found in the home of relatives about 8 miles from Williamson over the Kentucky line.

He said he understood Atkins would be returned to Huntington by two Federal men who were in Williamson.

Travis also was charged with attempted extortion and both men waived preliminary hearing before

Cruiser to Carry Body Of MacDonald to Britain

London, Nov. 12 (A).—The admiralty announced tonight that the British cruiser Apollo would bring the body of former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald to England from Bermuda, where it is due to arrive Monday. MacDonald died last Tuesday night on board the steamer Reina del Pacifico.

Atlee Pomerene Expires at 73; Oil Prosecutor

Pneumonia Fatal to Former Senator and Chairman of RFC.

Cleveland, Nov. 12.—Atlee Pomerene, 73, former chairman of the RFC, special prosecutor in the Teapot Dome Oil inquiry and for 12 years a Democratic Senator from Ohio, died tonight. He had been ill several weeks with broncho-pneumonia.

Death occurred at 6:12 p. m. His wife was with him at his death.

Atlee F. Pomerene, during his 12 years' service in the United States Seante, was known as one of the best informed members of that body. But it was as special counsel in the Teapot Dome oil fraud cases that he came into national prominence.

Appointed with Owen J. Roberts, later Justice of the Supreme Court, to represent the Government in the oil cases, Pomerene participated in a successful fight in the face of skilled, tenacious opposition.

He was a Democrat. But it was at the hands of two Republican Presidents that he received his highest honors. His assignment to the Teapot Dome case came from President Coolidge. In 1932 President Hoover made him chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

He took office August 1, 1932, and although his oppointment never was confirmed by the Senate, directed RFC activities until the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Under his administration the RFC relief act, providing $1,500,000,000 for self-liquidating construction projects and $300,000,000 for direct-relief loans to States and their subdivisions, was put into operation.

When President Roosevelt came into office there was a strong belief

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 12 (A).—Mrs. Mayme Welch Miller filed suit in Circuit Court today asking $50,000 damages for the death, on October 20, of her husband, C. W. Miller, attributed to an elixir of sulfanilamide.

7 Convicted in D. C. Crusade To Break Up Betting on Races

All were ordered committed to District Jail by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, who denied a plea that they remain at liberty on a bond pending appeal.

The defendents were calm when the verdict was read. They face severe jail sentences.

The seven were arrested in the first of a series of 65 raids made here last spring by police and deputy United States marshals, who had orders to smash the gaming business in the District. In all, some 250 persons were arrested and are awaiting trial for various alleged infractions of the gaming laws.

Elaborate precautions were taken by police operatives and United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to prevent any "leak" on the impending raids on suspected gaming places. Several score police and marshals were herded into the Camp Simms rifle range, where they were handed sealed orders. About 16 raids were staged the first days, followed by others in relays until all

Police Squad For Crashes Assured D.C.

Judges and Corporation Counsel Give Approval to 'Kreml Plan.'

Accident Investigation, Expert Testimony to Aid Convictions.

A flying squadron of policemen trained to investigate traffic crashes and testify in court was assured for the District yesterday when Judge John P. McMahon announced judges and corporation counsel approved the "Kreml system" of accident control.

The plan will be introduced experimentally in the Second Precinct in about six weeks with some 30 crash experts expected eventually to be on duty throughout the city. Seven Washington policemen already have taken the course at the University of Maryland under Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, Evanston, Ill., traffic expert.

These trained officers, traveling in especially equipped cruisers to the scene of an accident involving personal property damage, will investigate, make photographs, take measurements and interview witnesses. Should they decide the law has been violated, they will be qualified as efficient complaining witnesses and will be directly responsible for handling the case in court.

To Insure Court Appearance.

This method of police prosecution is designed to insure traffic law violators being brought into court and the chances of conviction increased. Under present procedure, drivers involved in accidents often arrange private settlement of damages and avoid appearance in court, although a law has been violated.

Sanction of the project was revealed after a conference in Judge McMahon's chambers, at which Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, outlined the plan. Present, besides Judge McMahon, were Judges Walter J. Casey, Edward W. Curran and Hobart Newman, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton D. Korman, George D. Neilson, John O'Shea and Oliver Gash, Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards and William Holmes, Capts. Milton D. Smith, H. G. Callahan, A. E. Miller and L. E. Kelly and Lieut. W. T. Storm.

Countess Suffers Broken Leg When Hit by Motor Here

Countess Marguerite Cassini Loiewski, 55, niece of the late Count Cassini, Ambassador of Russia to the United States from 1900 to 1904, suffered a broken leg last night when she was struck by an automobile at Connecticut and Rhode Island avenues northwest.

The countess lives at 1745 N street northwest. The driver of the car, police said, was Enoch Karr, of 4910 Wheeler road northwest.

Mrs. Julia Sikken, 50, of 1324 Monroe street northwest, suffered a fractured skull, internal injuries and a broken arm and leg when hit by a car at Sixteenth street and Park road northwest last night. Miss Ruth R. Mussun, junior at the fashionable Marjorie Webster School was released on $500 bond, pending the outcome of Mrs. Sikken's injuries.

Others injured in traffic included Otis J. Rogers, 3512 Thirty-first street northwest, skull fractured in collision at Connecticut avenue and Fessenden street; Burton H. Lamore, 60, of 1218 Grace Church road, fractured knee when struck by an automobile at Alaska avenue and Sixteenth street; Mrs. Marie Nichols, 33, of 2139 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, skull fractured when struck by a hit-and-run driver at Longfellow street and Illinois avenue, and John Prediger, 33, of 1104 Eighth street northwest, knee broken when struck by an automobile at Mount Vernon place and Eighth street northwest.

Zoo Gets 2 Cows To Show Children The Origin of Milk

To convince city-bred children there is really such an animal as the cow, and that that is where the milk comes from, two prize Guernseys will be installed today at the national zoo.

The two genuine moo-cows, Kenilworth Melody and Kenilworth Sarah Belle, are from the herd of the Willomere Farm on the former Fred Drew estate at McLean, Va. They will be quartered in the old elephant house for the next ten days. Zoo attendants will do the milking.

War Blame To Japanese Splits Parley

U. S., Britain, France to Seek Strong Note From Brussels.

Session Today Weighs Message on Refusal to Negotiate.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Nov. 12.—Sharp differences over a declaration containing American-supported phrases placing responsibility on Japan for continuation of the conflict in China tonight threatened to disturb tomorrow's meeting of the Brussels Conference.

The declaration, which would take the place of any further note to the Japanese government following its rejection of the conference's peace overture, will be submitted to a private, plenary session of the conference tomorrow.

France, Great Britain and the United States were known to be in agreement on its contents. The Americans took a prominent part in drafting the declaration, but some other delegations were said to be attempting "to tone it down."

Third Invitation Ruled Out.

A proposal to send a third appeal to Tokyo was ruled out tonight in a meeting among Paul Spaak, president of the conference; Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary; Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister, and Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation.

Japan's flat rejection of the conference's peace overture of November 6 coincided with the declaration of a high Japanese authority in Brussels that the United States, acting for itself, still had a "ticket of entry" to discuss peace in the Orient with Japan.

This authority said American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in Tokyo, could always approach the Japanese foreign office to discuss the Far Eastern war from the standpoint of the heavy American interests involved.

But Japan's refusal to have anything to do with the Brussels conference and her denial of the applicability of the Nine-Power Treaty of 1922 under which it was convoked were considered categorical and final. Her rejection was contained in a note which reached the conference through the Belgian foreign ministry.

Tonight many delegates were asking: What is the United States Government prepared to do about the war in the Far East?

Delegates showed particular interest in the opening of Congress next Monday and speculated that Congress might give President Roosevelt some lead which might result in a new American move. Most delegations seemed to be waiting for some initiative from the United States.

C.I.O. Auto Unions Exhorted to Force Cut in Meat Price

Detroit, Nov. 12 (A).—Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers, called tonight upon U. A. W. locals throughout the country to take "direct action" to lower the cost of living, "principally" that of meat.

In a letter, Martin called attention to "no meat weeks" scheduled to start in Flint and Saginaw, Mich., tomorrow.

He cited "failure" of Federal law to curb "monopolistic" tendencies, and added that "the U. A. W. is taking direct action to achieve results Governmental authority is slow in undertaking."

About 200 women were to begin picketing butcher shops at Lansing tomorrow in a campaign "to boycott meat purchases until prices are reduced."

U. S. Denies Report Of Naming Agent To Franco Regime

The State Department denied last night a press report from Biarritz, France, which said that the Spanish insurgent radio asserted last night the United States had designated W. E. Chapman, former consul at Bilbao, as "general representative" to the insurgent regime.

The radio said that the United States had "followed the example of Great Britain in an exchange of commercial agents with Generalissimo Francisco Franco."

The Department's spokesmen declared the cable was untrue "in every particular;" said that Chapman eventually would return to Bilbao in his capacity as consul, and added that he would not in any way act as this country's "agent" in dealings with General Franco.

Tax Relief Proposals In Extra Session Gain House, Senate Support

Compulsory Limit Kept for Tobacco

Processing Taxes Eliminated From Proposed Farm Aid Measure.

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday agreed on "voluntary" crop control for three major farm commodities and turned the job of financing the new farm program over to the House Ways and Means Committee.

This action threw processing taxes out of the House farm bill, and apparently assured a separate revenue measure to pay ever-normal granary costs.

It raised the immediate possibility that the program will be financed from general revenues, rather than processing taxes. Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, has said his group will consider itself "free" to propose any type of taxes it deems desirable.

Quotas to Be Cut Out.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee said compulsory marketing quotas for cotton, wheat and rice will be eliminated from the farm bill. The so-called compulsory quotas on tobacco, to which there is little opposition, will remain in the bill. No final action was taken on the corn program, but strong opposition has developed in the corn belt to compulsory control.

Jones estimated the cost of the program in new taxes to be drafted by the Ways and Means Committee at between $175,000,000 and $200,000,000, over and above the $500,000,000 annual cost of the soil conservation program.

Tempting Benefits Needed.

The committee's decision on voluntary programs for cotton, wheat and rice means tempting benefit payments must be made to farmers to persuade them to co-operate in control measures. The alternative compulsory method relied on strict marketing quotas, with penalty taxes for over-quota sales.

Processing taxes or general revenue legislation to finance the more costly voluntary program, which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has called the "bait" method, will depend on subsequent Ways and Means Committee action.

"We are going to frame payments for the farmer on soil conservation and domestic allotment based on tilled acreage, and with productivity taken into consideration," Representative Jones said. He said commodity loans and "ever normal granary" storage features must be further studied.

Mother and Daughter Held in Man's Slaying

Gate City, Va., Nov. 12 (A).—Commonwealth's Attorney Hagan Richmond, of Scott County, said tonight charges of murder had been preferred against Mrs. Venice Mitchell in connection with the death of W. H. Mitchell, 68, her husband.

'Aid Business'

RFC Head Says Business Gains Due 'by Spring'

Roosevelt to Meet Utility Leaders Next Week, He Announces.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation predicted yesterday that business would improve soon, certainly "by spring."

Asserting the situation was not so serious as some believed, he added that he saw nothing "to justify the present feeling of uncertainty and uneasiness."

Earlier, President Roosevelt announced at his press conference that he would confer with a group of utility executives next week and listed what he considers obstacles to a boom in residential construction.

Counts on Home Boom.

With an effort to balance the budget by cutting expenditures, and a readjustment of the tax schedules, the Administration apparently is counting on a boom in home building and, possibly, utility construction to reverse the recent downward trend of business indices.

The Chief Executive said he assumed that the question of placing a valuation on utility properties for rate-making purposes would come up at the next week's meeting, but was uncertain whether the discussion would reach the point of utility construction programs.

Calls Land Too High.

Earlier in the week he asked that the utilities apply the yardstick of so-called prudent investment to valuations rather than that of original cost or the cost of reproduction. He offered the co-operation of his Ad-

4 Bandits Get $12,000 In Wild Raid on Office

Boston, Nov. 12 (A).—Four men, shooting wildly, today robbed the Boston agency of the Packard Motor Co. of a $12,000 pay roll.

Announcing their presence by shooting at windows and walls, they dragged Timothy Smith, cashier, from his cage and grabbed the money, covering at the same time a guard, John Conley, six women and several men.

O'Connor Would Put Business Aid Ahead of Roosevelt Agenda.

Declares Slump Creates a Crisis

O'Mahoney and Pittman Call for Immediate Action on Levies.

By Robert C. Albright.

A movement for special session tax relief action to check the downward business spiral gathered momentum yesterday in House and Senate.

Chairman John O'Connor of the House Rules Committee called for action "now." He urged modification of the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy ahead of the President's five-point legislative agenda.

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said modification of the undivided profits tax should be undertaken as "the first step" to business recovery, and Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, president pro tem of the Senate, said "I do not see why it cannot be done right away."

Bankhead Is Doubtful.

But Speaker Bankhead was skeptical over chances for tax revision before the regular January session, and Chairman Fred Vinson, of the special House tax sub-committee, declared flatly it would be inadvisable to take "hasty" action.

"We were criticized for acting too hurriedly in framing the undivided profits tax, and we would be subject to the same attack if we speedily modified it. We are going to do what we can to ease tax inequities and hardships, but it will take time. I do not see how it can be done in the special session."

Meantime, leaders wrestled with the regular agenda problems, conferred among themselves and continued their visits to the White House to talk with the President on session business.

Government reorganization bills definitely were slated for House action ahead of the farm bill, as it became aparent that the ever-normal granary measure will not be ready for action next week.

Two measures on the President's calendar appeared already routed to the special session pigeonhole for "study and investigation" only. They were anti-trust law revision and the eight proposed regional planning authorities. The first bill has not been drafted, and the second has not been reported by either House or Senate committees.

Wage Bill Deadlocked.

One other, the wages and hours bill, continued to baffle leadership ingenuity and efforts to budge it from its Rules Committee deadlock. An attempt will be made next week to shake it loose from the Rules group. Failing that, leaders said it would take until December 13 at earliest to discharge the committee by petition. Recommitment to the Labor Committee for rewriting was still a possibility.

It was O'Connor, Rules Committee chairman, who first contended modification of the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy should be placed ahead of all of these measures.

"The trouble is nobody will speak out," said O'Connor, "Everybody is afraid to speak. We ought to have modification of these taxes, and make them quit this snooping around by the Securities and Exchange Commission. It should be done right away—ahead of the five-point program. That is, a long-

Former Miss Moffatt Charges Cruelty in Arizona Action.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 12.—Charging cruelty, Mrs. Margaret Moffett Carlisle, daughter of James A. Moffett, a vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of California, and a former director of the Federal Housing Administration, won an uncontested divorce today from Jay Freeborn Carlisle, jr., New York City.

The trial was private. Mrs. Carlisle declined to comment on the divorce or on a separation agreement determining future custody of their 3-year-old son, Jay, jr.

They were married in 1932.

Party Leaders Warn of Third Term Menace

Democratic Governors and State Chairmen Oppose Roosevelt Nomination.

Opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt was reported yesterday by two Democratic Governors and two chairmen of State Democratic committees, who voiced pro-Roosevelt sympathies but guardedly warned against a third nomination.

Replies in a private third term poll followed emphatic third term opposition recently from the Democratic State chairmen of Florida, Kansas, South Dakota, Mississippi, Alabama and Minnesota.

Senators' Views Published.

Comment from three Democratic Senators made some time back was likewise made public. They were either opposed or noncommittal on the third term issue.

Gov. Peery and Gov. Quinn reported third term opposition sentiment in their States. Pollard said he found many "not favorable" among the rank and file, while Gibbons admonished that precedent-breaking in this instance might be "disastrous" in the future.

The poll is being conducted by Joseph Leib, of South Bend, Ind., who organized the "First Roosevelt For President Club" in 1930.

Comments included:

Gov. Peery of Virginia—"I think the majority of the people in Virginia are pro-Roosevelt. However, I believe there is a strong sentiment in Virginia against the President's being elected for a third term."

Against Third Term.

Gov. Quinn of Rhode Island—"Personally I am an admirer and supporter of President Roosevelt. I do think, however, that sentiment in Rhode Island would be against a third term for any man."

Gibbons, chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Arizona—"I have made it my business to inquire thoroughly into the sentiment here. To date I have not found one Democrat who has not been thoroughly in accord with President Roosevelt and the policies which he has been trying to inaugurate, but I do meet with this fear: Many of them are afraid that should we break the precedent set by previous Presidents for only a second term it might prove disastrous at some future time, and that none of them are skeptical of the motives of President Roosevelt, but once a precedent is broken it might easily be broken at some subsequent time and someone would be elected to the Presidency who might have ulterior motives and disastrous results might come of it."

Would Support Candidate.

Pollard, chairman of the Vermont Democratic committee—"If the President is a candidate for a third term, I should expect a delegation favorable could be secured in Vermont. Among the rank and file I find many not favorable to a third term. I am a Democrat and would support anyone the national convention saw fit to nominate."

Senator Morris Sheppard, Democrat, Texas—"The President has indicated that he will not run a third time. He has thus killed that issue himself."

Senator Walter F. George, Democrat, Georgia—"I am not in the position to discuss the third term suggested, but in my opinion we have nothing to fear. I do not know that the President has fully intended to announce himself for a third term."

Senator M. M. Logan, Democrat, Kentucky—"I am not for the President for a third term."

Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, majority leader of the Senate—"I am not in a position to make any statement or prediction concerning this matter."

ministration if they would change their valuation methods.

Referring to the housing program, Mr. Roosevelt said that some legislation, but not much, would be necessary and expressed a desire that it be enacted soon. The proposal is directed at the stimulation of large-scale building of houses for sale, or for rent.

The President said the first obstacle was high real estate costs. If a builder goes sufficiently far from the center of a town to obtain a satisfactory acreage price, the problem of providing transportation for those who are to buy, or rent, the houses is presented, he said.

The high cost of labor is being approached, he continued, with the idea of substituting a guaranteed annual wage for workers in the building trades for the present high hourly rates. Material costs may be reduced through volume purchases.

Interest charges run as high as 8 per cent and more in the North and 10 to 12 per cent in the South, he continued. It was expected that this phase of the problem would be attacked through the Federal Housing Administration which insures the repayment of privately made loans for building purposes.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States announced yesterday that a conference of leaders in the construction industry and Government housing officials on November 17 would seek "to develop a practical program to stimulate residential building by private enterprise."

"This timely conference," said John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the national chamber, "will afford an opportunity for a realistic discussion of the obstacles now standing in the way of a revival of residential building."

Need for Public Alarm Over Too-Rapid Balancing of Budget Is Denied.

By Franklyn Waltman

MUSING over this vale of tears in which we live, I wondered whether there is a single harassing problem which we as a nation have escaped. Something always is plaguing us. If it is no runaway speculative activities, it is an industrial recession. If it is not a drought it is record crops. Finally I decided that nothing more could happen to us. But I was innocent and naive.

WALTMAN.

Listening that night to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau's address to the Academy of Political Science, I learned of a danger overhanging the country of which I had never dreamed, the danger against which Secretary Morgenthau warned the Nation in moving too rapidly toward a balanced budget and a reduction in the national debt.

"The rate at which it is safe to reduce the public debt in private hands depends upon the rate at which private funds flow into investment channels," asserted Mr. Morgenthau. "It is unsafe to go too fast."

Startling as Mr. Morgenthau's words were on first hearing them, the country need not be alarmed. If the Roosevelt Administration has been conservative and cautious about any one thing it is in the direction of balancing the budget and reducing the national debt. Just to see whether the Administration was going too fast in reducing the debt, I consulted the daily statement of the Treasury.

This document revealed that the national debt on Tuesday was $37,028,000,000 and that on the corresponding day a year before the debt was $33,800,000,000. No, there seems to be no need to worry about the Treasury reducing the debt too fast—if it ever gets going in that direction.

* * * *

Some very conservative people around this country are greatly in favor of the New Deal getting reckless like the Coolidge Administration and reducing the debt a billion dollars or so each year.

* * * *

Unless Mr. Morgenthau deliberately wished to add a subtle touch of levity to his address, it is a shame that it was marred by such humorous observations at this time as that it is dangerous to reduce the debt too fast. The course of action outlined by that address, if carried out, is beyond criticism, except that it has come much too late.

Mr. Morgenthau outlined a complete reversal of policy on the part of the New Deal. He made by far the most convincing promise of a balanced budget next year that has come so far from the Administration. He struck a conciliatory tone toward business and indicated that the New Deal was ready to listen to reason regarding those levies harassing business activity. He had the courage to assert that the tax base should be broadened, which constituted a recognition of the fact that the masses of the people and not only the rich must eventually pay for the New Deal's foibles, follies and more abundant life.

It is somewhat amazing that the Morgenthau speech did not give a substantial boost to security prices yesterday. But it is always amazing to this observer how the security markets function. On Tuesday at his press conference President Roosevelt recalled some rather incoherent remarks he made three years ago about public utility valuation and the "common law." Although his auditors listened carefully none seemed to know for sure just what the President was talking about.

One or two examples cited by Mr. Roosevelt indicated that what he meant by common law valuations was the prudent investment theory of valuation, that is, the value of a utility for rate-making purposes is the sum prudently and wisely invested in it. The common law is the "unwritten" law and is made up of practices, customs and the great body of law contained in court decisions, such as those of the Supreme Court. So that the "common law" on utility valuations is what the Supreme Court in this country asserts it is, without any connection with the Victorian era, as Mr. Roosevelt appeared to think. But utility lawyers never use the phrase "common law" valuations and they have no specific understanding of what it means.

That is beside the point here, however. Those correspondents who heard Mr. Roosevelt pondered what he said and finally came to the conclusion that what he was trying to convey was the thought that the Administration wished to be friendly with the public utilities. They thought that, because the Administration wants the utilities to feel confident and help out the present situation with a sizable construction program.

On the basis of the newspaper stories that Mr. Roosevelt had made a gesture of peace toward the utilities—the nature of which none knew or understood—the stock market on Wednesday had a rally. Stocks went up from 2 to 6 points. Well, if what Mr. Roosevelt said on Tuesday justified a rise of several points in security prices, then what Mr. Morgenthau said on Wednesday night should have set off a stock market boom.

* * * *

But it did not. In general, prices moved slightly forward but there was no sensational splash—not even as much as on Wednesday. One reason perhaps was that a stock market holiday intervened between the speech and security trading. Another contributing factor may have been that Senator Harry F. Byrd offset the Morgenthau speech by pointing out the history of New Deal fiscal policy from the same platform.

But perhaps the real reason is that the people with the money want more than words from the New Deal. For four years now the New Deal has found it popular to bait business, to engage in disturbing and uncertain experiments, to pile up debts and generally to act as if a capitalistic profit system can be made to work without profit. That it has reformed itself over night is too much even for the most credulous to swallow without further evidence.

O'Connor and O'Mahoney Call for Action to Aid Business.

O'Connor said the President's agenda was projected before the business slump was "fully realized" and "if there is any emergency it is this one."

"You've got a strike of private capital on your hands, and you've got to get it back," he continued. "One hundred and eighty thousand steel workers have been laid off recently, and 130,000 miners; others are working only two or three days a week. In my own city of New York garment workers have been laid off in large numbers. There are small retail stores living from hand to mouth.

Cites Psychological Effect.

"I am for the wages and hours bill, and I want to get it passed. But here is the irony of the thing—what good does it do to go to a man out of work and say, 'Here are better hours and more wages for you?' The man will laugh and say, 'That's fine, but I haven't even got a job.'"

O'Connor said employment needs a stimulus "and the one way to do it is to take the fear out of private capital."

"It's all right to launch a housing program," he went on, "but how about the customers if they haven't got work and haven't any money to buy houses? Why do you sell houses like hot cakes here in Washington? Because the customers have money and have stable employment on the Government pay roll. We must get capital back in, and we can't do it under the present tax laws.

"If we do this, the psychological effect will be more important than the actual fact. We'll be saying to business: 'We're going to give you a square deal, instead of going on the premise that every businessman is a crook.' You've got to remember that there are 5,000,000 employers in this country that nobody gives a thought to. Grade school economics tells you that you've got to have employers to have employes."

Senator Pittman said he opposed the undivided profits tax when it was before the Senate and believes it should be not merely modified but repealed. He said both matters should be taken up in the special session.

Criticizing the purpose of both levies, Pittman said:

Referring only to the undivided profits tax, Senator O'Mahoney said:

"The sooner it is modified, the better it will be. It could be revised to great advantage right away."

House Study Goes On.

O'Mahoney said he approved of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's statement that principal budgetary aims are to promote a high and healthy level of business activity, maximum employment at good wages in private industry, fair treatment of the farm population and adequate revenues.

"The first step toward that end," the Wyoming Senator said, "should be modification of the undivided profits tax. It would do more than any other simple thing to provide an impetus for employment."

Speaker Bankhead told reporters he still is of the opinion "that the slump is psychological." He said "some businessmen have undoubtedly encouraged a slump psychology."

A House Ways and Means subcommittee continued to study methods of aiding little business men and special "hardship" cases, but Chairman Vinson said the plan is to call the bill out in the regular January session.

Proposals to reduce the tax burden on perhaps 85 per cent of the country's small firms were discussed in committee. No decisions were reached, but Vinson said means were being studied for graduating downward the taxes on smaller business concerns that "have more need of retaining their net income, relatively, to build up their businesses."

White House visitors included House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Chairman Jones, of the Agriculture Committee and Senator John H. Bankhead, (Democrat), Alabama, author of a new cotton control bill.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Senator Pittman lunched with the President at the White House. Barkley will return to the White House probably this week-end for another conference on the session's business.

Small Fire in Capitol.

A pile of newspapers and trash caught fire yesterday in the Capitol building, in the rotunda on the south side. Firemen from No. 3 engine found the fire out when they arrived. Damage was described as trifling.

of compulsory control for wheat, cotton and rice was in sharp conflict with the bill being framed by the Senate Agriculture Committee, which employs the marketing quota method. It clashed with the views expressed Thursday by Speaker Bankhead, who declared emphatically for "compulsory control."

Jones freely admitted the House farm bill will not be ready for the opening of Congress next week, despite leadership efforts to expedite consideration. At least a week's delay is in prospect—tax features may require much longer.

The Texas Representative said his committee felt the Ways and Means Committee was better equipped to prepare the necessary tax features because of "practical and legal phases of the situation."

Tobacco control features, which apparently will be left intact in the House farm bill, call for a 50 per cent tax on excess sales after a referendum among farmer on quotas. The quota method would be applied only after a surplus was proclaimed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The corn control program, which awaits final action, includes a 25 per cent tax on over-quota sales. Controversy over so-called compulsory features has arisen in committee, and Jones is waiting for other members of the committee from corn-producing States to return to Washington. The corn phase of the program will be considered by the committee today.

In the Senate, Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, was preparing to offer a cotton crop control bill with compulsory features. Bankhead called at the White House yesterday to tell the President "90 to 95 per cent of all Southern cotton farmers favor control of cotton production and marketing" to avoid new taxes.

Wagner Visions Vast Low-Rent Housing Boom

Greatest Building Program Ever Seen Will Come in Decade, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—Senator Robert F. Wagner predicted tonight that within a decade this country would be embarked upon "the largest and most efficient low-rent housing program ever undertaken anywhere on earth."

Recalling his own childhood in the slums, the New York Democrat declared the time had come to tear them down and to "uplift the lives and restore the hopes of 10,000,000 underprivileged American families."

Speaking at a dinner of the National Public Housing Conference, he said:

"Millions of idle men are still waiting to be employed upon the construction of homes. Idle capital is anxiously seeking an avenue of expansion. A cumulative ten-year deficit in home building has opened up a tremendous field for industrial activity."

"The tools are now being forged to promote the entry of private capital into the vast field of private residential construction," he added.

In paying tribute to Nathan Straus as administrator of the new housing law, Senator Wagner said Straus faced an opportunity "as rare as it is stimulating"—an opportunity to rehouse America.

Parley Discusses Mine Pact Dispute

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—Emerging from an all-afternoon conference of representatives of anthracite operators and the United Mine Workers of America, one of the conferees admitted today that "improper performance" of the present operator-miner contract had been under discussion.

The contract to which he referred will expire April 1, 1938.

The representative said both sides in the conference had made charges of improper performance of the contract.

The conferees, six representatives of the union and six of the operators, will meet again tomorrow.

John L. Lewis, head of the union, said later the conferees discussed the question of the rights of the companies under the contracts, especially the section which says there can be a six-day week 12 weeks a year to allow the freer flow of coal.

Paralysis Struck 8,450 In U.S. in 9½ Months

By the Associated Press.

The Public Health Service said today that infantile paralysis afflicted 8,450 persons in the United States from January 1 to October 16—a figure exceeded only by the 9,296 cases in 1935 and 13,600 in 1931.

The seasonal decline was less than usual this fall, the service said. During the last four weeks 2,615 cases were reported, more than twice the number in the same period a year ago.

Virginia Wife, CzechDiplomat Are Reconciled

Mrs. Stransky Drops Divorce; Meets Husband in Prague.

Dr. Pavel Stransky, Czechoslovakian diplomat, and his beautiful Virginia wife, the former Anna Henry, have been reconciled in Prague after a year of marital difficulties that began in Singapore and continued last August in Washington, when Stransky was accused of "kidnaping" the couple's 6-year-old daughter, James R. Murphy, local attorney, announced yesterday.

Murphy, Washington attorney for Stransky, said the trail of misunderstandings which had led half way around the world had been ended with Mrs. Stransky dropping the suit for absolute divorce she had filed in Arlington County.

Last August Stransky, said to have been wearing dark glasses as a disguise, drove in a big sedan to the East Falls Church home of Mrs. Stransky's father, the Rev. J. B. Henry, a retired minister. With him was another sedan occupied by two men, who also wore dark glasses.

Stransky, according to his brother-in-law, Province Henry, then drove off with the child, Mary Peyton. A year before her mother had brought her to Virginia from Singapore, where the diplomat was stationed.

Mrs. Stransky replied to the "abduction" by filing a divorce suit in Arlington County and asking custody of the child. Then, declaring she would fight for Mary Peyton's return, she took the next boat for Europe.

The controversy brought in international lawyers and the State Department after the legality of Stransky's removing the child from the country had been questioned. Mary Peyton, both sides admitted, is a Czechoslovakian citizen. Her parents were married in London in June, 1927, when Dr. Stransky was first secretary of the Czechoslovakian legation here.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 12.—Charles Talbert, building guard attached to the Interior Department in Washington, was taken to the Indiana State prison today to begin a six-month sentence for manslaughter.

Talbert was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the deaths of Peter Kaniewski, his wife and their 4-year-old son in an automobile crash near here September 4. It was alleged that Talbert was driving while drunk.

As he was led away to jail Talbert made only one comment. "This is likely to lose me my job," he said.

Lag in Shipping Laid to Salaries

San Francisco, Nov. 12 (AP).—J. W. Engstrom, president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, issued a statement today blaming deterioration of the American merchant marine on the years of "high salaries" enjoyed by executives of many of the individual steamship companies.

The statement answered a report Tuesday of the United States Maritime Commission in Washington, asserting high labor costs and lack of funds for vessel replacements threatened the future of the merchant marine.

"For 14 years," Engstrom declared, "they cut the wages of the seamen and longshoremen to such an extent that millions of dollars were saved (which these executives enjoyed). The money that they made in those 14 years has in no way been used up because of the union conditions that now exist."

Continued Bounty On Silver Forecast

By the Associated Press.

A leader of the Senate silver bloc indicated strongly yesterday that the bounty price paid domestic producers for domestically mined silver would be continued. The bounty, fixed under a proclamation by President Roosevelt, is scheduled to expire December 31.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said he did not believe legislation would be necessary to continue the price at the present figure of about 77.5 cents an ounce. This is far above the world price.

Asked whether the London silver agreement, designed to stabilize the world silver market, wou'd be continued, Pittman said he did not know. This accord is scheduled to expire December 31.

Brazil Fascists Leave Politics To StillRumors

Action Believed Vargas' Reply to Criticisms of New Rule.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 12.—Brazil's Fascist Party was dissolved today as a political organization and political circles interpreted this as President Getulio Vargas' reply to criticisms that his new corporative constitution had made Brazil a Fascist state.

Plinio Salgada, national head of the Integralist Action, the Fascist Party, declared the political section of his group abolished. He acted after he had talked with Francisco Campos, minister of justice and of th interior and author of the new constitution promulgated November 10.

In a manifesto to his green-shirted followers in the integralist movement he founded in 1932, Salgado said the party's sections on civics, morals and physical education would be preserved. He added that the new constitution made political parties unnecessary.

Apparently he referred to the electoral college created by the new constitution. This body is empowered to nominate a new president, but the retiring chief executive can, if he chooses, name another candidate. In that case the contest goes to the electorate.

Salgado had been candidate of his party in the presidential race begun last May but ended October 2 when President Vargas proclaimed a state of war, which ended political campaigns. The election was to have been held January 2.

By the United Press.

A close tie-up between President Vargas' new corporate dictatorship and the $1,000,000,000 coffee industry—backbone of Brazilian economic life—was indicated today in the appointment of Fernando Costa, head of the national coffee department, as minister of agriculture.

The announcement came as it was reported that Vargas had decided to hold onto the presidency for six years.

Shakeup Opens In WhiteRussia As Chief Quits

Successor to Suicide Is 'Freed From Duties' as President.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 12.—A new shakeup in the administration of white Russia was reported today with the removal of the republic's second president in five months.

A. S. Grad, acting president since the suicide of A. G. Cherviakoff last June, was "freed from his duties" by the central executive committee, of which he was chairman. He was succeeded by Nikifor Natalevich. Vice Premier Ivan Yuravloff also was removed.

Cherviakoff committed suicide when the purge of alleged Soviet enemies spread to white Russia—that part of the Soviet Union adjoining Poland—early in the summer and 43 of his colleagues were seized on charges of treason.

The white Russian shakeup came shortly after the reported recall of the Soviet ambassadors to Germany, Turkey and Poland.

Meanwhile, 61-year-old Rosalia Samoilovna Zemlyachka, one of the leading women Bolshevists and a member of the Communist Party for 40 years, was said to have dropped from public view.

J. D., Jr., Says Business Alone Can Aid Jobless

Financier Declares Freedom of Action, Initiative Are Essential.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—John D. Rockefeller, jr., said tonight that business alone ultimately could provide jobs for the unemployed "on a continuing basis and on an adequate scale."

The financier expressed this view in a radio speech indorsing the unemployment census to be conducted November 16.

A "prerequisite" to re-employment, Rockefeller said, was such "accurate information in regard to the capabilities and fitness for various classes of work" as could be obtained in the forthcoming census.

Rockefeller said the "great majority" of the jobless were "anxiously looking for the opportunity to get back to work."

"Business alone can ultimately provide the opportunity on a continuing and on an adequate scale," he continued. "This it can do only if it has the nation back of it, and sufficient freedom of action and initiative to enable it to go forward confidently and unafraid."

Accurate answers to the questionnaires distributed in the census, Rockefeller said, are necessary to give a "clear understanding of our chief economic problem and lay the foundation for a constructive program of re-employment."

Wife-Killer Calm As Crime Is Told

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 12.—Paul A. Wright, 38-year-old airport executive, listened unmoved today to a police version of the killing of his wife and "best friend"—a crime the officers said he admitted "because she was cheating on me."

With an air of detachment he heard a coroner's jury return a verdict that he killed his wife, Evelyn, and John B. Kimmel.

Policeman H. W. Reed testified: "When we got the call we went to the house. We met Wright. He had a gun in his hand. He said, 'I'm a murderer. I've shot my wife and best friend.'"

Reed said he and another officer found Mrs. Wright, "who still had a slight pulse," and Kimmel, "who was moaning," side by side on the floor of the living room.

Rev. J. A. Smyth Will Succeed Father Gavan

St. Peter's Church Pastor in Baltimore Chosen by Archbishop.

The Rev. James A. Smyth, pastor of St. Peter's Church in Baltimore, will succeed the late Mgr. Patrick Gavan as pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Archbishop Michael J. Curley announced yesterday.

The Catholic Review, in publishing the announcement said the Rev. Father Smyth would continue as pastor of St. Peter's for several weeks.

Father Smyth was ordained by the late Cardinal Gibbons in Baltimore Cathedral in 1901. His first appointment, following his ordainment, was as successor to Msgr. Gavan as assistant pastor at St. Joseph's Church, Washington.

After three years at St. Joseph's, Father Smyth became assistant pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Parish. From 1905 to 1920 he served as assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church in this city.

In his latest parish, Father Smyth took special interest in church music and gained a wide reputation for his sermons.

He is the son of the late William R. and Mrs. Sarah Denver Smyth and is one of four brothers who entered the priesthood. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth is pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase, Md., while the Rev. John Carter Smyth, C. S. P., is a member of the Paulist Missionary Band. The fourth brother in the priesthood was the late Father C. Carroll Smyth. Another brother, Lieut. William R. Smyth, is a detective on the Baltimore police force.

Father Smyth has two sisters, Sister Mary Thomas, of the Order of the Sisters of Mercy, stationed at Mount St. Agnes, Mount Washington, and Miss Gertrude Smyth.

Father Smyth was educated at St. Brigid's Parochial School, Loyola High School, Loyola College and St. Mary's Seminary.

Christmas Savers To Get $7,345,000 In D. C. This Year

A total of $7,345,000 will be distributed within two weeks to members of Christmas Savings Clubs in 18 Washington banks, according to the District Bankers Association.

Christmas savings depositors this year number 82,858, as compared with 76,309 in 1936. Total deposits show an increase of $1,084,310 over last year.

Bankers said the Washington deposits, which average $89 per member, are double the sums pledged by users of the holiday savings plan in other sections of the country.

Although installment purchases and insurance premiums will claim their share of the cash distribution, it is expected that most of the savings will be converted directly into Christmas gifts.

Haiti Plans to Ask U. S. Mediation in Dominican Dispute

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—President Stenio Vincent of Haiti has drafted a formal request for the good offices of the presidents of the United States, Mexico and Cuba in seeking settlement of Haitian-Dominican difficulties, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

Cables to Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lazaro Cardenas and Laredo Bru are to be sent shortly, possibly tonight, it was said.

Haitians, who were said to regard the situation arising over alleged slaughter of "thousands" of Haitian nationals in the Dominican Republic as a threat to international peace, already have sounded out the three governments whose preliminary action was favorable, it was said.

Japan Peaceful, Death-BedNote Of Adm. Uriu Tells U. S. Friend

Fighting for Stability, He Wrote Classmate of Annapolis '81.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 12.—A Japanese admiral's death-bed letter, describing the war in China as "Japan's fight for peace," arrived here today 24 hours after the death of the admiral, Baron Sotokichi Uriu, last Japanese graduate of the United States Naval Academy.

The letter, written at Odawara to his lifelong friend, O. E. Weller, president of their class of '81, completed a cycle of unusual correspondence. Five minutes before learning of Uriu's death yesterday, Weller mailed a letter to him, in response to Tokyo dispatches of October 26 that Uriu had received two cardiac injections to give him strength to dictate the letter to Weller.

"Japan is now desperately trying to establish and secure those conditions which are essential for peace and stability in eastern Asia," the dying admiral wrote. "Paradoxical as it may seem, she is really engaged in a mission of peace. She is fighting for its fulfillment because all peaceful methods have been exhausted.

"Japan fully recognizes that China has grievances against us, as we have against them," he continued, "and we are fully aware that only an organized and stable China can secure peace and stability in east Asia."

China's desire for "freedom from foreign domination," he went on, "is a just aspiration as such, but this fight for freedom has often taken place in the form of violence against one foreign nation or another. . . . Now Japan happens to be the target and fares the worst, not only because of the magnitude of the conflict, but because the whole world condemns her for retaliating and seems to be hanging upon Japan's shoulders the whole burden of Chinese grievance, for which she is only partly responsible."

"Grievances Historical."

"China's real grievances are historical," he said, "mounting from 100 years ago when Western powers began to dismember China and forced upon her the so-called unequal treaties. Japan was the last to appear on the scene, and in her case she obtained her share because her very national existence depended upon it.

"What Japan is fighting today are China's violent anti-Japanese policy and the menace of communism. . . . The anti-Japanese policy is a menace to our interest directly, but communism in China, which is aided and abetted by the Communist International in Moscow, is a danger to the entire Far East. Its presence cannot be tolerated by any nation which desires to pursue peaceful and legitimate business in China."

As if happily unaware of the nearness of death, the 81-year-old admiral prefaced his views with a word of "regret to know that so many of our fellows have crossed into the Great Beyond, for they were all grand fellows; but at the same time it was encouraging to hear that there are 25 of us still here, bound by the old ties of comradeship, though separated by distance.

"For some years I have not been on the good side of health, but this has not destroyed by interest in social and national affairs. . . . Age is but a quality of the mind . . . and when letters like yours come to me I feel thoroughly refreshed and revitalized.

"Nothing could be as comforting to an old man in retirement as a letter from an old friend which awakens vivid memories of good old times. Living in the quiet seaside town of Odawara, whose shores are washed by the same waters which sweep your Pacific Coast, I cannot help but reminisce about my American friends, whom I value not only in the personal sense but also as links which bind your country and mine in bonds of amity."

among members of Congress that the Chief Executive ought to have control of RFC activities, unhampered by the opinions of holdover officials.

So Pomerene left his job and returned to the private practice of law as a member of the firm of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey in Cleveland.

There, although ostensibly retired from public life, he continued to take an active interest in national and world affairs.

His attitude toward the New Deal, formally polite at first, became increasingly annoying to him. As Senator from Ohio from 1911 to 1923, he had battled tirelessly for such measures as the Federal Reserve act, establishment of the Federal Trade Commission and the St. Lawrence Waterway. He had been regarded as a liberal.

In 1928, indignant at the thought of religious bigotry, he had fought vigorously for the election of Alfred E. Smith, leading a campaign in the Middle West to bring members of the legal profession under the Smith banner.

Pomerene was sharp in his criticism when the Nation went off the gold standard, and in 1934, speaking before the American Bar Association convention, he scored the Administration severely.

Pomerene was a product of the American tradition for statesmen. He was born at Berlin, Ohio, on December 6, 1863, the son of Dr. Peter P. and Elizabeth Pomerene.

He received his early schooling at Vermilion Institute, Hayesville, Ohio. In 1882 he was graduated at Cincinanti Law School. He held honorary degrees from Wooster, Mount Union and Kenyon Colleges and from Miami University.

On June 29, 1892, he married Mary H. Bockius. He then was practicing law in Canton, Ohio. His career in politics began there in 1887, when he was named city solicitor. From 1897 to 1901 he was prosecuting attorney of Stark County.

In 1906 he became a member of the State Tax Commission. Four years later he was a political power in Ohio and was chosen chairman of the Democratic State convention, and during the same year was elected Lieutenant Governor.

In 1911 he was elected Senator for the first time and in 1917 was re-elected. His defeat in 1923 was attributed to a battle with the Anti-Saloon League, always strong in Ohio.

In 1926 he was a candidate for the Seante again. That time he lost to Frank B. Willis after a hard campaign.

D. C. Attorney's Stepdaughter Suicide in N. Y.

Catherine Wilds, 27, Pens Farewell Note to Mysterious 'Piggly.'

Miss Wilds was private secretary of Harper Bros., publishers. Neither her mother nor her stepfather, Paul Campbell, of 1312 Twenty-second street, Arlington, could explain the tragedy nor identify "Piggly," to whom her last note was written.

Gas was flowing from two jets when the girl's body was found, clad in a kimono. The note was pinned to the dresser.

"Dear Piggly," it said, in part, "I'm sorry. Can't stand any more doubts. You're swell. A little high-tempered. You know what your grandmother said about liking temper in people. So do I.

"You've given enough to get what you want. It would be wasted without a little more now. Sorry I 'piked' out.

"Only the nice things were real. I don't believe—no more affection. If it disappears, it will come back to help. The walks in the woods and the horses were the nicest."

Until her mother and stepfather moved to Washington, Miss Wilds lived with them in Chattanooga, Tenn., where she had operated a small library since her graduation from the University of North Carolina. She had been in New York since last winter, and apparently was getting along well. One of her acquaintances described her as being a "very deep, intelligent girl," who "dabbled in literature."

Pastors to Stress Missionary Work

Observing the seventh annual Men and Missions Day, promoted by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, ministers in several Protestant churches tomorrow will call the attention of their congregations to missionary activities. "The Gospel For a Groping World" is the theme of observances planned.

The Ministerial Union, through its president, the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, D. D., has indorsed the plan, and the National Cathedral will cooperate by having as its speaker tomorrow afternoon John R. Mott, one of the leaders of the movement since its inception.

This years' celebration will be climaxed Friday night, when 500 men, representing the various denominations, gather in the Calvary Baptist Church for a dinner. The principal speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Dan A. Poling, of Philadelphia.

Beautiful All Souls' Church Rises From Rich Background

Many Famous Figures of History Have Made and Listened to Sermons in Old and New Buildings.

Famous people have sat in the pews of all Washington's older churches, but few pulpits have been occupied by as many celebrities as that of the First Unitarian, now known as All Souls' Church.

A national controversy was provoked by an abolitionist sermon preached in the original D street building by Moncure D. Conway when the well-known author was acting pastor, Horace Greely, then a member of Congress, attended the service and reported it for the New York Tribune. The storm of protest which followed resulted in Conway's dismissal.

Edward Everett Hale, later chaplain of the United States Senate, began his career as a minister in this church. In the late 1920's, Ralph Waldo Emerson stopped in Washington on his way to Boston long enough to preach one of his first sermons there. William Henry Channing and Samuel Longfellow, brother of the poet, served as pastors for a short time.

The name of the church was changed to All Souls' in 1877, when the congregation moved to a new building at Fourteenth and L streets. When the second site became hemmed in by shops and office buildings, work was begun on the magnificent structure which now stands at Sixteenth and Harvard streets.

Completed in 1924 at a cost of over half a million dollars, the new church is modeled after historic St. Martin in the Fields in London. A balustraded parapet crowns the portico of Corinthian columns and the red brick walls with their white stone trim. Soaring above the classic pediment is the clock tower with its slender spire.

The interior is distinguished by contrasting white woodwork, walnut pulpit, red wall hanging and huge bronze chandeliers. Adjoining the church in the rear is the parish house. One wing of this building houses a small stage and projection room, and the other the Ida May Gale Memorial Library.

The parish was organized in 1821. Notable members included President Millard Fillmore, John C. Calhoun, Daniel Webster and George Bancroft. Former President Taft belonged to the church and his funeral was held there.

Dr. Seeger fo Give Talk at Services

Dr. Raymond John Seeger, associate professor of physics at George Washington University, will speak at chapel services Sunday night at Central Union Mission. Music will be by the quartet from Altoona, Pa., Rescue Mission.

The C. U. M. Ministerial Council, at its recent meeting, adopted a resolution of condolence on the death of John S. Bennett, whose wife succeeded him as superintendent of the institution.

"For almost a quarter of a century he served with unselfish devotion," the clergymen said. "During this long period the institution came into the time of its greatest usefulness and he was primarily responsible for its success."

Holy Trinity Society Plans Breakfast Sunday

Launching a program to co-ordinate the several organizational activities of Holy Trinity Catholic Church, the Holy Name Society of the parish will serve a breakfast following its monthly mass Sunday morning in the assembly hall of the school. Prominent officers of the city-wide Holy Name organization will attend.

A general reception of the parish will take place in the hall Monday night, when a social program will be presented.

Pastor to Give Talk as Church Welcomes 20

Service at First Congregational to Feature Songs and Questions.

"There Is a Fourth" is the subject of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson's sermon tomorrow morning at the First Congregational Church. Twenty new members will be received.

The evening service will feature gospel song singing, a question box and a brief address, "Flying Thy Purple 'Round Me."

The questions Mr. Anderson will discuss are:

"Can the Duke of Windsor hope for a useful life?"

"Will Congress in session help or frighten business?"

"Was sterilization of delinquents in Kansas wise?"

"Do more young people attend church now than formerly?"

"Is prayer psychic?"

Mount Pleasant. "The Questing Soul" is the sermon subject of the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, D. D., minister, at the 11 o'clock service of worship. At 8 p. m. the chorus' first musical evening of the season will feature Sir Joseph Barnby's cantata, "Rebekah," a beautiful lyrical setting of the Bible story of the love of Isaac and Rebekah. The soloists will be Evelina Evans Clinchy, soprano; Raymond T. Pigott, tenor, and Carroll E. Robb, basso.

Dr. Rustin Will Preach; Quartet To Sing at Methodist Service

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Southern Methodism's Representative Church, will preach on "The New Congregation" tomorrow at the 11 o'clock service. ## Mortals, Immortals Topic of Scientists

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Galatians 4:6,7: "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson sermon is the following from the Bible: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. (Colossians 3:1.)

The lesson sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus gave the true idea of being, which results in infinite blessings to mortals."

Dr. John Mott To Be Speaker At Cathedral

International Chairman to Lead Observance of Mission Sunday.

Dr. John R. Mott, chairman of the International Missionary Council will deliver the address tomorrow afternoon on the seventh annual observance of "Men and Missions Sunday" in Washington Cathedral at 4 o'clock. This service will be part of a Nation-wide effort to arouse interest in the missionary cause of the Christian Church, sponsored by the National Laymen's Mission movement, of which Dr. Arthur Holley Compton, of Chicago, is president.

One of the most distinguished laymen in the Methodist Church and a member of the Council of Washington Cathedral since it was first organized, Dr. Mott has spoken from the pulpit on Mount St. Alban on several occasions. He was one of the leaders of the world conferences on "The Life and Work of the Church" at Oxford this last summer. His book on "Mobilizing the Lay Forces of the Christian Church" has been used by church groups in all parts of the world.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the Cathedral and warden of the College of Preachers, will deliver the sermon at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Music for both these services will be furnished by the Cathedral choir of men and boys. The Holy Communion will be celebrated in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 a. m.

Hearing Called On Limiting of Grain Trading

Wallace Says Individual Speculation Is Likely to Upset Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday a hearing will be held at Chicago December 1 on a proposal to limit individual speculation in grain futures under the commodity exchange act, in an attempt to prevent wide price variations.

The Administration farm chief declared "excessive" speculative operations, particularly by a few individuals constituted a "grave danger in any market and may force prices far out of line."

Wallace said the Commodity Exchange Commission contemplates limitations on daily trading as well as open commitments. Different limits may be fixed, he said, for different grains and for the different commodity markets.

Such limitations, he explained, would not apply to "bona-fide" hedging transactions.

The commission also will hold a hearing at Chicago November 30 to consider prohibiting trading in grain futures during the last ten days of the delivery month. Such regulation, Wallace said, would tend to prevent market congestion that endangers grain prices.

Trading in all grain futures combined on the Chicago Board of Trade during October amounted to 1,017,956,000 bushels, compared with 940,531,000 bushels for September and 1,340,817,000 for August. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, trading in all grain futures averaged 1,219,282,000 bushels monthly.

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

My opponent at a duplicate table, having just played the last card at a three no-trump contract, snatched up the traveling score sheet and immediately let out a loud groan.

"Isn't that just my luck?" he demanded of the table at large. Everybody made four notrump! I knew, when I guessed the diamond finesse wrong, that I'd get a rotten score!"

I said nothing but thought privately that he deserved very little sympathy. Let me show you what he had called "a guess."

West, my partner, opened the heart Jack. Declarer won with the Ace, and made the correct play of passing a club. I captured dummy's nine, and returned a heart. Declarer won, and led a club to the King, getting the bad news when West discarded a spade. The spade Queen was next led. West won and, although he was now entryless, thought he could do the least harm by continuing with hearts. On this round I let go a low spade. Declarer, having taken his third heart trick, cashed the King and Jack of spades, West discarding a diamond on the latter. Now declarer cashed the diamond King, and then finessed to dummy's ten-spot. I won and later had to be given a second club trick, so the declarer just made his contract.

Declarer explained to his partner that he had been forced to take the diamond finesse against West, because to take it the other way would risk letting West on lead and might mean the loss of two heart tricks. That explanation was very fine as far as it went but, unfortunately, it was based on a completely false premise. If declarer had been forced to take a diamond finesse he would have had to take it as he did. But the point was that any diamond finesse was ridiculous. All 13 spades had been played. I, East, had shown out of hearts. Declarer knew that he eventually would have to concede another club trick to me. Why not concede it, then, at a time when the concession would do him good?

The play that could not lose was to cash the Ace of clubs, and throw me on lead with the last club. Obviously, I would have had to return a diamond and, no matter where the Queen lay, the automatic finesse resulting would have given declarer a laydown for four-odd.

The Federal Diary

Res. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Ended, We Hope

Seeming, from the very start, to be much more noise than needed, the great row between the United Federal Workers of America and the Secretary of Labor (although the Secretary had little to say about it, was apparently ended yesterday. And happily so, because there were all indications that the American Federation of Government Employes—an ordinarily peaceful group—was about to jump feet first into the melee and agitate something that might last six months, too long for any row to last.

The trouble (if it is possible to state an involved row simply) came when the U. F. W. A. protested against the Labor Department's conciliation plan, which brings members of rival unions on a "board" hearing grievances. They also protested an alleged order by the Secretary which would make compulsory the carrying of all grievances before the conciliation board. The union wanted to negotiate with the supervisory officials.

And so Secretary Perkins called them all in, the U. F. W. A., the A. F. G. E., the N. F. F. E., and was told by all but the U. F. W. A. spokesmen that the conciliation plan of the Department of Labor was working well. Then came the crossfire, the snapping, barking and backbiting, one union at another. In this morning's mail, from Lodge No. 228 (Labor), A. F. G. E.:

You have received numerous communications from Local 12, U. F. W. A. regarding the Secretary's Conciliation Committee in the Department of Labor. So that your readers may know how little foundation there is to some of the statements in question a marked copy of the complete memorandum of the Secretary is inclosed" . . . The marked portion of the Secretary's memorandum, dated October 12, reads:

"It is axiomatic that good personnel administration provides free access by employes to responsible administrative officials for the discussion of individual problems affecting their status and welfare. Whenever an employe desires to avail himself of an informal discussion with officials, he should feel free to use that means of making his viewpoints known. Nothing set forth in this statement should be construed as discouraging an employe or group of employes in any bureau from discussing problems with their supervisory officials."

Then comes communications from both A. F. G. E. and U. F. W. A. stating the text of a letter Secretary Perkins has written all lodges. Here it is: "Pursuant to our conversation of November 4 and after careful consideration of the many suggestions made, I am writing to you and a representative in the membership of any union of their own choice. Furthermore, the Depart. nt of Labor recognizes and always has recognized the right of employes to be represented by the union of which they are members in dealing with responsible officials of the department in respect to grievances or other working conditions falling within the administrative discretion of these officials."

The A. F. G. E. repeats that it has had no complaint to make. The U. F. W. A., which started the controversy, said through its president, Jacob Baker, that it is "a source of gratification to be assured that Miss Perkins is in harmony with the President."

Says the editor flatly: "From right now on, the I. D. R. A. News is going to appear once a month instead of once every fortnight." The reason: The I. D. R. A. News is a pretentious sheet, and the editor has been writing on it between 3 a. m. and 6 a. m. To quote the editor verbatim: "I've got other work to do."

Behind the Government's inflexible routine, a Puckish face sometimes glimmers. A certain sprite of humor must have ticked-tacked the ribs of the minion who writes the "Facts and Artifacts" press release for the Government when he wrote:

"No Tippling Tolerated. A provision that patrons should not be allowed 'to tipple and drink more than is necessary' was included in a document found in old Virginia records and docketed under the title, 'Bonds for the proper conduct of the Swan Tavern' at Yorktown, Va. Swan Tavern today is still well patronized, but not by potential tipplers. Its interest lies in the close-up it permits of the tempo of life in pre-Revolutionary days at the present Colonial National Historical Park."

This column does not know (and it is not essential) who wrote those lines for the Government's press service. But beyond human doubt, he paused at the line, "and drink more than is necessary," for to what searching lengths could such be carried. It opens up such realm of thought as Ph. D.'s are hung on.

To begin with, tippling is necessary to the proper functioning of a tippler. And how far a tippler can go before he reaches the stage where he and the tippling become more than is necessary could easily engage the research of a WPA exploring crew. Just as a starter, it is known that two drinks are necessary for a tavern rendition of "The Old Oaken Bucket;" it requires four tipples to produce "Let Me Call You Sweetheart;" six drinks to produce the proper tenor griefs on "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," and 12 drinks for the slobbering "Sweet Adeline."

Such are our thoughts on a matter that has engaged your Government. But maybe, right now, you had rather have an announcement from the famous editor of the I. D. R. A. News, which comes in the next paragraph.

Announcements, boiled down: Railroad Retirement Board Lodge 375, A. F. G. E., announces that its regular November meeting is postponed to today; it will be held in the RRB cafeteria at 8 p. m.; there will be amendments to the constitution and a nominating committee will be selected to name candidates for the annual election in December; Joseph L. Burke is president; J. M. MacLeod, secretary . . . Another reminder of the joint dance and party to be held by Treasury Lodge 362, GPO Lodge 149 and FCC Lodge 367 on next Friday evening at the Playhouse, 1814 N street . . . The Federal service gets good representation when the Players Club of the Central Community Center presents "Turn Over Artemis," three-act comedy, at Roosevelt High School the evening of December 10. The play was written by B. Gary Huffham, young North Carolinian, an employe in the records division, GAO. Included in the cast are Jerry Buckley, of the FBI Players; Frederick Cole, SSB; Helen Chamblin, John Josselyn and Arthur Sandberg, all of records division, GAO. The play is now being considered for possibilities by a motion picture concern.

Air Company's Sleeper Plane Plan Rejected

Crowley Rules Plan of United, Western Is Against Statute.

By the Associated Press.

Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, recommended yesterday that the United Airplane Transport Corporation and Western Air Express Corporation be denied permission to operate a through sleeper plane passenger and express service between New York and Los Angeles.

Crowley submitted to Postmaster General Farley a finding that the proposed service "is contrary to the provisions of the air mail act of 1934 as amended."

He said the contract submitted to the Postoffice Department "is, in effect, an agreement for the operation of service forbidden by law" because the proposed service would conflict with operations of other air-mail carriers.

Crowley's conclusion said:

"It is doubtful in my mind whether the Government could ever approve this contract even if it should not be considered unlawful, because of the adverse effect on the earnings of two other transcontinental lines which are forced to compete with each other for business originating between Eastern points and Los Angeles, and especially when we consider that already one of the objecting companies—the American Airlines, Inc., has just secured a raise of its rates by approximately $345,000 per year, and another objecting company—Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.—is applying for higher rates.

"Should this proposed operation be allowed, these companies undoubtedly would ask for further payments of Government funds for the operation of their respective air-mail routes.

D. C. Firm in Suit To Bar Picketing

Alleging that it was not engaged in a labor dispute and that it was being picketed because the employes themselves declined to join the union, the Quaker City Linoleum Co., 601 F street northwest, yesterday in District Court obtained an order requiring the local Carpet, Linoleum and Soft Tile Layers Union to show cause next Tuesday why they should not be enjoined from continuing to picket the company's place of business.

Through attorneys James A. Cobb and George D. Horning, jr., the company alleged in its complaint that since the picketing began, there have been fist fights and some of its windows have been smashed. It was alleged the picketers were not members of the union, but were professional pickets employed by it.

Fruits Of Labor Warfare.

A storm of protest has been aroused by the order of the National Labor Relations Board directing the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York to abrogate its contracts with an A. F. of L. union on the ground that the company has discriminated against a C. I. O. group. President Green, of the A. F. of L., is calling for a drastic reorganization of the Federal agency, while the head of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers says the decision leaves all A. F. of L. unions "no other course" but to go to Congress and demand abrogation of the Wagner act.

As matters stand it would obviously be reasonable economy to scrap the machinery established by the Government in the hope of facilitating collective bargaining. But such action would not eliminate the jurisdictional disputes between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. which form the root of the trouble.

It is these which prevent effective enforcement of the Wagner act and make the Labor Board itself increasingly ridiculous in the public eye. In case after case the board has found it necessary to intervene in order to find out which of two warring labor factions really represents a majority of the workers in an industrial bargaining unit. As a result the board has incurred the enmity of both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. The more it tries to be fair the more suspect it will be to both these groups, each interested primarily in injuring the other.

Whether the Labor Board exceeded its power in ordering the Edison Company to abrogate a contract with an A. F. of L. union, or whether it was right in assuming that the company had discriminated against the C. I. O. are questions of law and of evidence. Court rulings and authoritative interpretations of the Wagner act will not, however, rescue the Labor Board from its present untenable position. The only way in which the board can be made an efficient instrumentality for furthering collective bargaining is for labor to settle its own differences and give the board a united support.

The leaders of the labor movement are actively cutting their own throats when they engage in bitter factional disputes. They are encouraging employers to play one side against the other. And they are also proving that the Wagner act was sentimental legislation which labor itself did not want, and now even seeks to repudiate. Evidently no serious consideration can be given to any wages-and-hours bill until it can be made clear that this too would not become a football for antagonistic union leaders.

Sectional "Advantages."

The Governors of six New England States have called a conference at which they intend to lay plans for combating the "aggressive, organized, well-financed competition" of the Southeastern States. The New Englanders are said to be aroused by Southern efforts to attract new industries through an advertising campaign setting forth the advantages of the low taxes, low labor and living costs and mild climate of the South. They also have been alarmed by a move to secure freight rate revisions more favorable to the Southeastern States.

Intersectional rivalries of this sort present a disheartening spectacle to Americans who realize that the United States has achieved economic power and greatness largely by ignoring the invisible boundaries that separate State from State. As the country has grown we have come increasingly to appreciate the value of constitutional prohibitions against State import and export duties that would have divided the United States into as many independent trading areas as there are States.

The South is entitled to advertise her natural advantages in the form of cheaper water power, mild climate and transportation facilities. Some other alleged advantages are evidences of a backward social order of which her political leaders should not be proud. Such is the case where wages are unduly low and hours of work exceptionally long. Even low taxes often mean insufficient local provision for public needs.

The New England Governors may be pardoned, therefore, for "ganging up" against indiscriminate advertising of the superiority of the Southeast as a location for new industries. Indeed, the entire country has an interest in any campaign intended to bring about a shifting of industry for the purpose of exploiting unorganized labor.

The Situation Has Changed.

When President Roosevelt a month ago issued his summons for a special session of Congress his chief objective seemed to be enactment of several measures left unfinished at the adjournment last August. The international situation may also have influenced the call. But for the most part, the session which opens on Monday was designed to accomplish what introduction of the Supreme Court issue prevented Congress from doing earlier in the year.

As the legislators reassemble in Washington, however, they are confronted by problems which the President does not appear to have anticipated. The present business recession was already in evidence when Mr. Roosevelt decided to bring Congress back in November. But evidently it had then made very little impression upon the trend of thought in Administration circles. As a result, Congress is meeting to consider a legislative program which the present situation makes largely inadmissible.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, was undoubtedly thinking of the change which has occurred when he wired Secretary Morgenthau, "There must be some modification of undistributed profits tax." But some other leaders are less aware of it. Speaker Bankhead seems content to promise a "drive" to enact five major bills in five weeks. And Senate Majority Leader Barkley appears to be primarily interested in setting a new legislative speed record.

The paradox to which this legislative "drive" has given rise is perfectly illustrated by the plight of the proposed farm bill. Secretary Morgenthau has pledged the Administration to a balanced budget through a reduction of expenditures, including agricultural outlays. But the farm program to which the Administration committed itself when the need for economy seemed less acute calls for new taxes or further additions to the national debt. In short, events of recent weeks have notably sharpened the arguments against the farm subsidies sought by Secretary Wallace.

In the case of the wages-and-hours bill, the changed outlook is equally significant. The important step now is to stem the tide of increasing unemployment rather than to set up arbitrary restrictions calculated to diminish employment opportunities. For the same reason the creation of new regional planning agencies similar to the TVA ought to be carefully reconsidered.

Certainly it would be inexcusable for Congress to rush headlong through the legislative program outlined by the President without stopping to appraise the present situation. Before adjournment both houses foolishly went on record in favor of the enactment of a crop-control bill. But that should not and does not require them to accept any bill which runs counter either to constitutional or budgetary requirements. It is to prevent precisely such blunders that one Congress is forbidden to bind its successors.

The first duty of Congress, therefore, will be to survey present conditions and then realistically adjust economic legislation to the new outlook. That will not be a job for a high-speed legislative mill, but for a thoughtful, deliberative body aware of its own grave responsibility for the national welfare.

A Check On Lobbyists.

Frequent rumors of political influence imposed upon the Federal Communications Commission give special point to the orders just issued by that agency. Chairman McNinch has frankly acknowledged "that over a period of years there has grown up, like Topsy, the practice of making suggestions, requests or recommendations to members of the commission and its staff" when quasi-judicial issues are under consideration. The FCC, under his leadership, is acting vigorously to stamp out the practice.

The gist of the new rulings is that no communication will be considered by the commission in determining the merits of any case "unless it has been introduced into evidence at the hearing and appears as a part of the record." That may not stop Congressmen from urging the approval of radio licenses for their constituents, nor lobbyists from pleading their case whenever an opportunity is presented, but it should bring all written appeals into the open. And it puts members and examiners of the commission under special obligation to consider only the formal record in deciding a case.

Mr. McNinch's tactfully worded statement leaves no doubt as to one source of pressure on the FCC. "To all who desire that the commission conduct its affairs in a manner that will best serve the interests of the public and reflect credit upon the commission and Congress" he makes a "frank appeal" for support of the new orders. That is undoubtedly addressed to members of Congress who have been in the habit of making informal pleas in behalf of interested constituents. Since publicity is one of the most effective means of dealing with pressure tactics, the FCC should now be able to function in a much more salutary atmosphere. Lobbying may continue, but if it is not entirely in the open the commissioners are bound to ignore it. Perhaps that is as good a protective device as can be worked out. If it operates smoothly at the FCC, every other quasi-judicial agency may well adopt a similar policy.

In Trust For China.

Of the three separate and distinct political entities into which Shanghai is divided, one—the Chinese municipality—is now in Japanese hands. But Japan's triumph may also result, directly or indirectly, in a profound alteration of the status of the International Settlement and of the French Concession as well.

This is indicated in a statement by Lieut. Gen. Matsui, the Japanese military commander at Shanghai, which seems to foreshadow an illegal attempt by Japan to extend its control to the international portions of the metropolis. To the powers with interests in that city, such a move would constitute a challenge which could not be ignored.

They have a common stake in preserving their treaty rights at Shanghai as in China as a whole. But only if unity obtains among them will there be found the necessary strength to cope with the Japanese threat. That is one reason why Japan's maneuver in seeking to separate the United States from the other powers represented at Brussels, by indicating that Tokyo would not be averse to having the United States as mediator, deserves instant repudiation.

In any event, the International Settlement and the French Concession at Shanghai have now reached a decisive turning point in their political evolution.

Less than a hundred years ago, Shanghai was an unimportant fishing village on the muddy Whangpoo. It was opened first to the British and soon after to other foreigners as a consequence of the Opium War and the Treaty of Nanking of 1842. Since then it has grown by leaps and bounds and today is not only China's largest city but the fifth largest port in the world.

Of the three municipalities at Shanghai the one of greatest economic importance is the International Settlement which represented, at the outset, the consolidation of British and American interests. Based on certain rights granted by the local Chinese authorities and incorporated in periodic land regulations, the International Settlement has today a unique type of government.

Technically all of Shanghai—including the Settlement—is under Chinese jurisdiction. Actually the International Settlement enjoys a very large measure of independence, limited only by the occasional interference of the consular corps and the even rarer intervention of the diplomatic body. A council elected by individuals and corporations paying land taxes is the governing body and the municipality takes care of all normal governmental functions, including policing.

Since the independence of the Settlement has been vigorously maintained against reasonable Chinese protest it must be safeguarded with equal determination against unreasonable Japanese aggression. Until the time comes to relinquish extraterritorial rights at Shanghai to China they must certainly be kept inviolate from Japan.

The Incidence Of Taxes.

According to a study which has been announced by the Twentieth Century Fund, over 17 per cent of the income of an average urban wage earner in New York State, earning $2,000 annually, goes to the tax collector. But the New York farmer of equal income is estimated to pay less than 10 per cent of his income in taxes.

Comparisons of this sort are interesting, but not as much so as they are misleading. It is assumed, for instance, in this study that innumerable indirect taxes on articles of necessity, as well as property taxes paid by landlords, are shifted to the shoulders of wage earners in the form of higher prices and rentals.

Of course such shifting occurs, but that is not the whole story. If landlords paid no taxes, if the goods bought by wage earners were entirely tax-free, it is safe to say that living costs and consequently wages would be a good deal lower than they now are. In other words, while concealed taxes are shifted to the shoulders of wage earners, they in their turn shift them back to industry and to consumers, by organized demands for wage increases.

It is impossible to determine just how the total tax load is distributed among the various groups and classes in any country. There is no possibility of analyzing the innumerable and unsuspected adjustments made necessary by taxation, both direct and indirect. That being the case, efforts to estimate the proportion of the tax burden carried by wage earners who think they pay no taxes are at best incursions into the realm of speculation.

The War In The Air.

From the Chicago Daily News.

Cloaked in darkness the German bombers drop high-power phrases upon the strip of East Africa once dotted with German colonies. Swift as light the Italian bombers lay down a barrage of eloquence upon the Near East which swarms with the sons of Islam. Then up from London swoops the British word-fleet. Armed and rearmed, they release long-range fire upon the Fascist bombers. Under the collision the air lanes shudder and crackle. Nation strives against nation in realms hid from the eye and all too close to the deafened ear.

The war in the air besieges the continents. For three years the Italian radio station at Bari has blared forth anti-British propaganda couched in Arabic. For two years the German radio station at Zeesen has trumpeted anti-British propaganda couched in South African Dutch. At last the British will launch a counterattack. The B. B. C. transmitters will broadcast British world policy couched in Spanish, Portuguese, Arabic, Afrikander and English.

Years ago the radio was to be the benevolent agent which would bring the nations together in mutual understanding. Today in Europe its purpose is to turn words into guns and phrases into shells.

"Radio Prudery."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me commend you for the editorial "Radio Prudery" in the issue of November 12. Nothing that has happened recently has made me quite so furious as the action of the National Broadcasting Co. in refusing discussion of Surgeon General Parran's campaign against syphilis and gonorrhea over the network. Gen. Hugh Johnson would have done a great public service if he had been able to complete his intended broadcast.

What really gets in my hair is the statement of the broadcasting company that it finds itself unable to contribute to Surgeon General Parran's campaign "without seriously embarrassing the family group."

I wonder if any of these prissy Victorians have any idea of the thousands of family groups that are being "seriously embarrassed" by syphilis and gonorrhea in the United States today and for more vital reasons than would be the case if information of its existence came into the home over the radio?

I wonder if any of those precious gentlemen have ever been in an insane asylum, in an institution for the feeble-minded, in a social disease clinic?

I wonder if any of them have ever been present when a young mother was told that her newborn child was blind?

I wonder, also, if the broadcasting officials realize what they are doing to the "family groups" they are so concerned about when they send out the blood-and-thunder programs that leave children so emotionally excited that they cannot eat their dinners. I wonder what they are doing to the family group when youngsters spend time in which they should be getting their lessons listening to drooling comedians filling their homes with every type of vicious rot—programs that send Mother to her room nervously exhausted, and Father off to the club?

With all their faults, thank God for the newspapers! READER.

Mr. Kennedy's Job.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On page 11 of The Post of November 10 appears this statement, by Mr. Joseph Patrick Kennedy, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission:

"This (i. e. the subjugation of the recalcitrant and demanding Algic seamen) is the toughest job I ever handled in my life."

A biographical sketch of Mr. Kennedy follows, from which I quote: "Thereafter he became general manager of a shipbuilding plant at Quincy, Mass., where he met a young Assistant Secretary of the Navy named Franklin D. Roosevelt. Next he joined an investment banking firm and laid the foundation of a fortune that now totals $50,000,000.

"In his early twenty's Kennedy married Rose Fitzgerald, daughter of a former mayor of Boston. They have nine children and live in a mansion that overlooks the Potomac."

On page 3 of the same issue appears this story under a Baltimore date-line:

"Two waifs were burned to death today in a factory where they sought shelter. The boys, William and Andrew Olszewski, 13 and 15, were found three hours after the fire. Their uncle, Harry Olszewski, said their father sailed on the freighter Algic recently after most of its regular crew was jailed on mutiny charges as a result of a sit-down strike in a South American port."

Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Your editorial warning of the "Tuberculosis Menace" which appeared in The Post of November 10 calling attention to the facts publicly stated by Dr. Coulter, director of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Bureau, renders a great service, as it helps to arouse the Washington public to the urgent need for larger funds to be made available to deal effectively with a dangerous situation.

Whatever may be the causes of this grave danger to public health in this Capital City of the Nation, glorying in its external beauties and broad avenues, with millions of dollars spent on architectural splendors, all will admit that the situation could be still worse, and would be, were it not for such efforts as have been made with existing resources, much of which is due to the work of the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in the District of Columbia, a voluntary organization of citizens.

Many may not know, and should be informed, that the existing tuberculosis clinic and its nursing service as well as the building of the great new tuberculosis hospitals at Glenn Dale were made possible largely through the efforts of this association, which still continues to allocate a substantial portion of the fund it raises from the annual sale of its penny Christmas Seals to pay for the Children's Tuberculosis Clinic and for the free X-ray examination of high school students.

The tuberculosis association, in addition to thus financing much of the tuberculosis work of the Health Department, also continues to conduct a large and highly successful summer camp for the care and cure of tuberculous children, a department of rehabilitation for the aid of recovering patients at the tuberculosis hospital so as to enable them to find employment not likely to result in a relapse of the disease, free health lectures for schools and for adult working groups, medical research for the discovery of new methods of dealing with the problem, and free information to all who ask.

Finally, the officers and directors of this association, plan as in former years, again to appear in person before the committees of Congress having the responsibility of dealing with the District health problem, to appeal on behalf of the otherwise unrepresented Washington public and urge them to provide adequately for the greater control of tuberculosis in this city.

Pending results of that action, we shall continue to carry on the various services in the fight to prevent the spread of the disease, using such funds as may be realized from the coming annual sale of our Christmas Seals which will begin on Thanksgiving Day and continue until Christmas.

RISLEY G. HUNT,

"The Nation's Shame."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two conflicting items on the front page of The Post of November 11 forcibly struck my attention and, it is to be hoped probably others also.

The first item, headed "Government-Business Moves," says that Senator Byrd has demanded that the "wasteful" New Deal "stop writing checks," in order to avert "disaster." This implied that Senator Byrd thinks there is no disaster to avert in our democratic Nation.

The second item, headed "Starving Boy of 13 Hangs Self; Police Then Feed Family." It described a New York City family of seven, down to their last bit of food, two grapes, which a 13-year-old member of the family ate and then hanged himself!"

I am one of those humble, tortured souls who happens to feel that a disaster of enormous proportions, or the seeds of one, is present in our democratic Nation so long as any person, however humble or unimportant (economically) he may be, is hungry to the point of starvation and suicide, especially through no cause of his own. While such conditions are permitted to continue we not only have an impending national disaster to avert, but we also have cause for deep shame. And no right whatever to call ourselves a civilized or humane Nation.

It would be well, perhaps, if Senator Byrd and others who seem to oppose all efforts of the people to gain well-being for themselves and their fellows could temporarily get down to their last two grapes and remain there until they learn the feeling of helplessness, degradation and despair that results when such a condition is reached. Such a feeling usually promotes a better understanding of universal economic needs of people and promotes a feeling of sympathy for other human beings in distress.

Because we, as a Nation, through design or delinquency, did not see to it that William Troeller, 13, had enough to eat he gave up the ghost. The fact that his starvation was not the result of a national food shortage is evidenced and emphasized by the item in The Post. The item said, "His suicide brought much food today to the remaining six members of his family, his mother, three brothers and two sisters. Police provided it. The pitiful family devoured the food eagerly while William's body lay under a sheet in the kitchen of their tenement home—his feet showing through holes in his shoes."

Whose is the shame in this case? As one of its citizens I claim it is the Nation's shame. It is the shame of the Nation's elected servants, as well as its citizens, who seem so incapable of managing human and business affairs so that every child, at least, is properly and adequately fed, clothed and sheltered.

Streetcar Fares.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This wonderful New Deal—raises wages, shortens hours, boosts taxes. Result—streetcar and bus fares are increased. And then they tell the suckers that it is the rich man who pays. FRAN O'CONNOR.
Washington, Nov. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped that none of those protesting so volubly against increase in car fares are New Dealers, for the reasons for the increase can be laid right on the New Deal doorstep. Didn't the Chief New Dealer throw the full force of his office back of the effort to increase wages, shorten hours and raise prices, and then brag that "we planned it that way?" And what about the taxes? And wasn't it claimed tha only the rich would pay? Well, taxes are one reason for the rise in car fares.

Boy With Rosser.

He had a white beard that might have been luxuriant way back there when beards proved men were men. But it straggled now over a vest that reached back to uncounted breakfasts, and his pale blue eyes appeared to look without seeing.

"I was with Rosser," he said. "I was just a young fellow then, just 14 years old. I wanted to be a Confederate soldier and I joined Rosser's Cavalry."

Those pale blue eyes wandered over to the place where they fought the Battle of First Manassas so long ago.

"We came right down here," he said, "and the Yankees shot at us and we got scared as hell. But we beat them Yankees."

* * * *

He heard rifles bang away on the green hillsides, where the eager, untrained armies fought on a hot and dusty day when he was a boy. He heard the flat crack of field guns that fired ten shots while the boys in his old army could load their guns. Those noises rolled over the field and the blue smoke drifted down the little rills while he listened.

"I remember this place," he said. "I remember when we came down with Rosser. Stuart, he was just a colonel then, but he was a gallant—yes, he was the gallantest fellow you ever saw with his white gloves and his plume. You don't know what cavalry was unless you saw Stuart."

His faded eyes darkened a little, and he pointed off to where a house stood with a deep roadway behind it.

"The Widow Henry used to live there," he said. "She lived right near where that house stands now. They tell me she was widow woman of a fellow that was on the old Constellation with Capt. Truxton.

"I don't know about that, but I heard the boys tell she was killed right there in her house on the old Bull Run Battlefield. They tell me her daughter was with her and tried to get her out.

"But they say Yankee soldiers and Rebs came into the house and fought around there while the old lady watched them, and died when a big shell came in the roof.

"I don't know about them things, of course, but that's what they tell me. They do say, though, that the Widow Henry was killed here."

* * * *

They were fighting the battle over again that day, 75 years after men killed each other under the same sun that beat down on the same historic spot. They were dedicating it by that noisy and harmless battle as a national park.

But this old fellow, with his thin white beard and his blue eyes, who used to be in Rosser's Cavalry, forgot the automobiles and the concrete highways and the cannon that shot so fast and roared so loudly in his ancient ears.

"We was up in the Valley with Jackson," he said, and his frayed beard waggled as he chuckled. "Yes, sir, we was up in the Valley with Jackson. They didn't call him Stonewall Jackson then. He was just a queer fellow they sent down and give a brigade to."

He turned and flung a skinny arm toward a knoll rising behind the place where the Henry house used to be. There was nothing on this knoll now but a dim fringe of trees and the pale smoke drifting away from where modern soldiers with modern rifles banged away with blank cartridges.

* * * *

"They didn't use no blanks back there in 1861," he said. "They had all kinds of shot in their guns. They had minnie balls big as your thumb and buckshot in shotguns and squirrel rifles you could drive a tack with at 100 yards.

"We didn't have them things in Rosser's Cavalry so early in the war, though. We had some pistols and some swords and a lot of bowie knives. We come riding down the Sudley road in a lot of dust and we saw Jackson fighting Rickett's and Griffith's regular batteries.

"We didn't have none of them repeating rifles the soldiers fight with nowadays. We didn't have nothing much to shoot with at all.

"But you ought to heard us yell. We galloped down that road and we yelled like you never heard before. Most of the boys was foxhunters and they yelled like they was out hunting foxes, and you never heard so much yelling.

"I think that yelling scared the Yankees more than all the shooting we did, which wasn't much, because, like I said, we didn't have many guns."

When you looked at this ancient, with his thin, white beard and his pale eyes and thought back 75 years, you found it hard to put him here in a real battle with his yelling and his horse and his long cavalry saber.

You heard the 75's cracking so fast you couldn't tell when they were released to fire again. You heard the mountain guns bang away and watched Marines toss smoke bombs behind their own lines to look like shattering bombs.

And, over all, you heard the rifles clamoring through all the other noise like spiteful housewives quarreling across back fences. They spit and crackled and you saw Rosser's old cavalryman dreaming of a mile-long line of muskets

* * * *

Rosser's cavalryman was very tired now and he creaked when he got up and sniffed the smoke that rose from the field where they fought the first Battle of Bull Run when he was a boy so long ago.

He said: "Take me back to my granddaughter; I'm tired." When he tried to grin, he looked sad. "I ain't what I used to be," he said, "back in them days when I was a boy in Rosser's Cavalry."

Militia Vs. Civilians.

TO THE professional military officer there is no duty more terrible than that of ordering his troops to fire on unarmed civilians, his fellow citizens, in time of insurrection. If he orders his men to shoot anyone who crosses a deadline previously made known to the crowd the dead and wounded are likely to be more or less innocent individuals in the front rank who were shoved across the line by pressure from the rear.

They may even include women and children, for it is the studied, ruthless purpose of those who promote such disturbances to put authority on the spot and exploit the humane instincts of the soldiers for their own advantage.

If, on the other hand, the officer fails to carry out a warning to shoot those who cross the line, the mob begins to doubt that he will fire at all, and the front ranks press closer and closer to the soldiers.

• • • •

IF, FINALLY, they are permitted to come close enough to grab the men's rifles the officer has lost the initiative and must then be responsible for anything that happens in a general rough-and-tumble. In this event the casualties are likely to be much worse than they would have been if he had made good his threat in the first place.

The theory of the deadline is that although it necessitates some bloodshed, it is actually humane and economical. The officer has a duty to his troops not to expose them to needless casualties by irresolution and must remember also that if he falters in a crisis he betrays the authority which he is supposed to personify and uphold.

But he is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't, and all officers dread the thought of such duty. The propaganda power of a half-dozen civilians, including, perhaps, a woman or a child, exceeds that of a hundred soldiers beaten to death in a fight which could have been averted, and the officer, though he might escape hanging, would go down in history as a monster. Nevertheless, he has no option to refuse duty or perform it half-heartedly because of personal reluctance.

The commander in chief, however, passes the buck in putting it up to him to decide the precise time to use force and how much force to use. The commander in chief is a politician. If the officer permits the situation to get away from him and result in a greater disturbance requiring greater force, there again he is to blame.

• • • •

SOME militia commanders send their men out for duty in civilian disorders without ammunition, and for the sake of their popularity in the community to let the fact be known. This is dangerous, because the mob leaders, who usually lead from the rear, will assure the crowd that there is nothing to fear from the rifles and that, anyway, the soldiers are their own kind of people and would shoot over their heads even if they did have ammunition.

But professional officers, trained to use military force if necessary, disagree with the practice of exposing their soldiers to attacks inspired by the knowledge that the rifles are unloaded or the understanding that the fire will amount to nothing more than noise.

The theory here is that troops should be armed to fight if necessary and should not be invoked at all unless the situation has passed beyond the control of the civil authorities. Then, usually, the trouble can be subdued by the presence of armed men and the frank understanding that they will shoot to kill if martial law is challenged.

THIS IS a shocking topic, to be sure, but one which constitutes an actual professional problem of the soldier, the more unpleasant in the last few years because of the tendency of State governors to call out the militia in trivial causes.

Huey Long called out the troops to seize election records in a fight which was strictly political and had the militia under arms half a dozen times under conditions in which shooting would have constituted political massacre. A Governor of Colorado used the militia to repel immigration of itinerant beet-field hands whose only offense was a desire to engage in backbreaking toil at starvation wages. And, more recently, in Rhode Island, Gov. Quinn used the militia to close a race track because the manager of the track had called him a liar in print.

There was nothing in any of these situations which would have justified military action, which is to say killing, and, that being so, there was no excuse for calling out the soldiers.

Reported Massacre On Haiti-San Domingo Border Conforms With Caribbean History; U. S. Intervention Seen Difficult.

By A. Curtis Wilgus.

THERE IS STILL a prevalent belief that the United States is the Big Brother of the independent countries on this continent. A century of self-preserving diplomatic statecraft directed at our southern neighbors has caused many to feel that any unusual occurrence in a Latin-American republic should be made our concern and that our dictum regarding the event should be listened to and heeded. Especially do some consider incidents, which on the grounds of justice and humanity seem to demand our cognizance, within our special sphere of interference.

But are we really our brother's keeper in this hemisphere? Can and should the United States interfere in affairs that are not its own, but which on the ground of humanity seem to demand our investigation and supervision? Before the "Good Neighbor" policy became effective each of these questions would have been answered in the affirmative. But now, five years afterward, we may well pause before attempting an answer.

The "massacre" of Haitians reported in the Dominican Republic does not constitute a new problem for the Haitians, the Dominicans, or the United States. The trouble has its roots deep in the past, and extends even beyond the separation of the two countries in 1844. The problem is certain to continue to be acute at intervals for years to come, for the question cannot be settled so long as the black and white races inhabit the same island, albeit in separate countries. Atrocity stories can, therefore, be expected from time to time, for to those who have studied Caribbean affairs the island presents as bloody a panorama of history as is to be found anywhere in this hemisphere.

Spaniards Named Isle 'Espanola,' Little Spain.

WHEN THE Spaniards arrived in this beautiful island, "The Land of Mountains" the Indians called it, they gave it the name of Espanola, or Little Spain. But soon European diseases and methods of warfare completely wiped out the Indian population and it became necessary within a generation after Columbus arrived to import Negro slaves from Africa. The blacks intermarried with the Spaniards and were held in uncertain subjection for three centuries.

Because human existence in the island depended upon the practice of agriculture, large-scale production necessitating slave labor became the rule. But tales of rich mines on the mainland of the continent enticed so many settlers away that on occasion the Spanish government found it necessary to forbid emigration under heavy penalty. Being poorly defended, the island became a prey to pirates, buccaneers, freebooters and the "gentlemen adventurers" of England.

In 1697 the western half of the island was ceded to France and given the name of St. Dominique, while the eastern half of the country was held by Spain. The boundary between these sections was uncertain and armed friction commenced. In 1777 a serious attempt was made to settle the boundary dispute, but this simply aggravated the question by bringing it to the fore.

When the French Revolution broke out in 1789, the French portion of the island was granted French citizenship. Thereupon the Negro slaves demanded similar rights and a protracted massacre began which lasted for several years. Amid this confusion the Spaniards from their side of the island commenced an invasion of the French territory, while at the same time the English attacked Port-au-Prince. Finally, in 1793, the French government abolished slavery.

Toussaint L'Ouverture Signaled Mortal Struggle.

THIS PROVED a signal for the blacks to take over the island for themselves, and under the famed Toussaint L'Ouverture a struggle to the death began between the blacks and the whites. In 1795 France, by the Treaty of Basel, gained possession of the whole islands, but the "Black Napoleon" issued a constitution and declared the island independent of the white Napoleon in Europe. The latter, try as he might, was unable to regain his rights although his generals seized Toussaint by treachery.

Again, on January 1, 1804, the blacks declared the island's independence under the name "The Republic of Haiti," with Gen. Dessalines governor for life. But no halfway measures were ever taken in Haiti, and finding the title governor lacking in picturesqueness, Gen. Dessalines proclaimed himself Jacques I, Emperor of Haiti. Immediately a massacre of Frenchmen began. Two years of murder and massacre under the Negro emperor was even too much for his subjects, and Jacques was assassinated on October 17, 1806.

After protracted civil war Christophe in 1811 became king of Haiti as Henri I, his bloody reign lasting until he committed suicide in 1820. Thereupon Gen. Boyer, as president, took over the authority and in 1825 France acknowledged the independence of the western half of the island.

Meanwhile the eastern part of the country, although nominally under the emperor, had in 1806 been regained by Spain. But in 1821 the great liberator of South America, Gen. Simon Bolivar, joined this section of the island to his Republic of Gran Colombia, declaring its independence from Spain on November 30, 1821. The next January, however, President Boyer conquered the eastern portion of the island and proclaimed it part of the Republic of Haiti.

This attachment, marked by intermittent massacres, continued until February 28, 1844, when Juan Pablo Duarte, the George Washington of the Dominican Republic, rose in revolt against the black President of Haiti, now Soulouque, the successor of Boyer, and proclaimed independence from Haiti. This eastern section then adopted a constitution on November 6, 1844, and Gen. Pedro Santana became the first president.

Boundary Line Of 1844 Never Definitely Marked.

SINCE 1844 black Haiti on the west has remained separated from the white Dominican Republic on the east by a boundary line never completely marked and never fully recognized as permanent. For years at a time raids across this imaginary line have been the rule, and movements of population back and forth have been of frequent occurrence. Atrocity stories have come out of this section of the island for nearly a century and untold numbers of whites and blacks have been killed on both sides of the line. Some accounts have been overstated, and many, no doubt, have been underdrawn.

The problem cannot be settled simply by arbitration or by the offer of good offices by the United States and other countries. As long as Haiti has such a great pressure of population, her citizens must seek outlets either in the less densely populated Dominican Republic or in countries outside of the island.

With a population of some two million—of whom 99 per cent are blacks, about 90 per cent are illiterate, and some 85 per cent, according to some authorities, having venereal disease—living together in a density of about 230 per square miles—the problem is not a simple one of marking and defending a boundary.

Long ago the whites of the eastern half of the island drove out the blacks in trying to make the Dominican Republic a "white man's country." Thus, race hatred, playing a major part in the problem, cannot be permanently solved by outside interference or by offers of arbitration made by the United States or any other government, especially if these governments have not been able to solve their own race problems.

The muse of history is fickle and has often laughed at the weak diplomatic maneuvers of human statesmen trying in vain to settle problems which are as old as the human race. •

Your Community Chest

IF THE Community Chest should close its doors, the 64 agencies which make up its membership would not go out of business. Too many people need them! They would just ask you for separate gifts, one after another. The Community Chest method is better for all concerned, and gets far more of your gift to the people whom you want to help.

Danger Ahead

By Barnet Nover

Brazil And The World.

WHEN THE MILITARY leaders in Paraguay seized the reins of government in March, 1936, and declared their intention of establishing a totalitarian regime at Asuncion, the event aroused only a passing ripple of interest abroad. In contrast, the parallel development in Brazil this week has produced world-wide repercussions.

Of course, Brazil is not Paraguay. The latter is small, remote and, from the viewpoint of world affairs, relatively unimportant. Its entire population is somewhat less than that of the City of Baltimore.

Brazil, on the other hand, is the most populous nation in Latin America. It occupies an area greater than that of continental United States. It is believed to be endowed with fabulous resources. And its importance, in terms of world politics, is attested by the fact that for a long time it has been the scene of an intense rivalry among the powers, each of them seeking by might and main to win Brazil's friendship.

• • • •

THESE circumstances help explain why a tremor of alarm ran through the democratic world; why, on the other hand, a shout of rejoicing arose in Rome, Berlin and Tokyo, when news came of the hoisting of the banner of the corporative state at Rio. But these facts alone do not tell the whole story. For the most important thing concerning the coup d'etat of Getulio Vargas was its timing. Coming when it did, whether by happenstance or design is immaterial, it appeared to play directly into the hands of the Fascist powers, and by the same token to be a body blow at world democracy.

Only a few days ago at Rome, Italy, Germany and Japan formed an alliance presumably directed against communism, but with the rich democracies as the real target of their attack. It was a further indication that, to an increasing degree, the lines are being drawn in the world between the so-called have-nots and the so-called haves.

When, close on the heels of the establishment of the Fascist Internationale, Brazil decided to join the totalitarian parade, it was inevitable that many should at once assume two things as true: First, that the Vargas putsch was inspired and possibly directed by Nazi and Fascist agents at Rio and, secondly, that Fascist Brazil would soon join the German-Italian-Japanese combination.

• • • •

THERE ARE REASONS to believe that both of these assumptions are false.

There is no evidence to indicate that Vargas was moved to do what he did by any pressure from without.

The coup d'etat of November 10 can be explained entirely in domestic terms and without reference either to Nazi and Fascist intrigues which, assuredly, have been persistent and considerable among the German and Italian elements in the land, or to the antics of the Integrelista Party, Brazil's green shirt variant of Italian fascism and German national socialism.

Similarly, the assurances given the American ambassador at Rio by the Brazilian foreign minister that Brazil had no intention whatever of joining the Fascist Internationale can be accepted, for the time being at any rate, at their face value.

Brazil has precious little to gain and very much to lose by joining any international combination of antidemocratic powers.

• • • •

HER ECONOMIC difficulties, which are and have been considerable for a long time and which explain not only Vargas' latest coup but much else that has preceded it, could hardly be solved by such a move. And since when have lambs voluntarily joined forces with wolves?

A land rich in resources which the Fascist powers covet and with only a feeble navy to protect its shores, Brazil, no matter what its form of government may be, is the last nation in the world to become the ally of Germany, Italy and Japan.

In the meantime there is anything but certainty that the hoisting of the totalitarian banner in Brazil means the actual and successful establishment of a totalitarian state.

Not by decrees alone nor by pronunciamentoes will it be possible to overcome the intense particularism to be met with in Brazil, where the states have always overshadowed the federal government. Not by fiat will it be possible to regiment all Brazilians into a Nazi or Fascist pattern.

Indeed, there is no certainty that the coup of Vargas may not produce a counter-revolution which will sweep Vargas into limbo.

• • • •

NONETHELESS, the alarm felt in this country, in Great Britain and France and in other democratic lands over the latest turn of events in Brazil is not unjustified, if for a different reason than that originally advanced.

In the world struggle of today prestige is a factor of surpassing importance. Italy and Germany are now in a position to claim as convert to their creed the largest of Latin-American states. The claim may be absurd but it may have its force nonetheless, since it does mean an increase in the area over which the banner of totalitarianism floats. By the same token, the prestige of the democratic states suffers a decline.

There happen to be a great many nations on the borderline between fascism and democracy. Most of them are waiting to see which way the cat jumps. They may now decide that the Fascist powers have the heaviest battalions behind them.

"If you can't lick them, join them," is a bit of American political realism which nations are only too prone to follow.

Thus the coup d'etat of Getulio Vargas, though completely domestic in inspiration and origin and repetitive, except in the new name given the regime, of so much that has preceded it in the history of Brazil as a republic, may have dangerous international repercussions.

George Or Bernard?

By William Lyon Phelps

Playboy Or Prophet?

G. B. S. has not only written many books, he is the cause of many other books having been written. The biographical and critical and polemical literature that has grown up around his name would fill many shelves. Archibald Henderson's revised and enlarged biography is the standard authority for facts; and will be used for many years to come by students of its hero.

All genius is bewildering; but Shaw is not only bewildering, he is puzzling. Prof. Henderson asks the question that is most commonly asked: Is he playboy or prophet?

To me Shaw is primarily neither. To me he is a man of letters, a man of genius who has written plays and prefaces and works of criticism that belong to literature and give happiness to those who, like me, enjoy literary and dramatic masterpieces. It is not what men say that keeps them alive; it is the way they say it.

Now to all those who read Shaw and would like some intelligent interpretation of his significance, let me recommend a new book that is both profound and brilliant. It is not only an acute and witty and clever exposition of Shaw's mental attitude, it is also a diagnosis of contemporary thought in general, and especially of the mental sickness from which so many are suffering.

• • • •

I am quite sure that Mr. Shaw does not read most of the essays and books that are written about him; but I think he has read, or will read, this one. For it comes from a first-class mind; from one who has wit and humor and who evidently loves G. B. S., while not agreeing with him. This brief book, which I have read with intense interest, is called "Shaw: George versus Bernard," is written by J. P. Hackett, of Great Britain and Ireland, and is published by Sheed & Ward, New York.

Joan's 3-Year-Old Melinda Shows Bennett Talent . . . On a Bazooka!

IT WAS pretty bad Monday night, but by Wednesday you couldn't even get through the crowd. Thursday night there was only one way of getting past the stage entrance congregation at the National Theater. You had to walk on the opposite side of E street.

TOM McCARTHY.

The play is called "Stage Door" but there's more than the suggestion of a name to call that sidewalk crowd to it's nightly vigil. There's Joan Bennett.

Frankly, I became a little curious, so I dropped back stage at the National to see Miss Bennett.

"Miss Bennett," I said, "there are about eight hundred and nineteen loyal fans outside the door there, struggling with some capable but outnumbered policemen. What are you going to do about it?"

Miss Bennett wrinkled her nose, and dabbed a very unglamorous smear of cold cream on her very pretty face.

"I," said Miss Bennett, "am going home and going to bed. And pray that I can get my eight hours sleep before Melinda cuts loose with that Bazooka of hers."

"But Miss Bennett," I said, "here you have hundreds of loyal fans stamping on each others feet in the excitement. And they confidently expect you to live up to the glamorous tradition of the theater. Miss Bennett, if you do not go out and dance—at least until dawn, you will have let them down."

"That," said Miss Bennett, "would be just too bad." I wouldn't swear that she didn't say "too darn bad." But before I had a chance to make sure, she began to ask the questions.

"Do you have a Bazooka in your home?" Miss Bennett asked.

Well, that sort of took me off guard. We don't have a Bazooka in our home. But the boy next door has one. And his folks let him play it some times, so I knew what Miss Bennett was undergoing.

"Melinda," said Miss Bennett, "has not only one Bazooka, she has a "Bazooka Swing Band." And that is why I am going home and go to bed now. When Melinda sleeps, I sleep."

• • • •

MELINDA is Miss Bennett's three-and-a-half-year old daughter, who travels with her famous mother, not only all over the country, but even to the theater for the matinees. And Melinda's Bazooka playing proclivities are just one reason why a star, bedecked with Hollywood glamour and the fame of an honored name in the theater, hurries home after the performance.

When Miss Bennett get's talking about Melinda, you know that she'd be the last person on earth to interfere with her daughter's Bazooka playing. For the information of those happily unacquainted with Bazookas it might be well to mention that they're sort of an out-size kazoo. Only they're much louder than the old style kazoo, so you can see what Miss Bennett is up against.

Outside, in the street, the crowd was growing impatient for a glimpse of a glamorous Hollywood star. And inside, in the simple dressing room, Miss Bennett was worrying about getting that eight hours sleep, before Melinda cut loose on the Bazooka. And wondering if her 9-year-old daughter, Diana, were getting homesick away at school.

"Ever go back to your old school?" Miss Bennett said. "Well, I took Diana up to St. Margaret's last September. And, really, I'll never forget the experience.

"She'll have the same teachers I had, and they haven't changed a bit." Miss Bennett emitted a ladylike chuckle as she wiped a little smudge of make-up from the corner of her eye and said, "Honestly, it made me feel so old. Teachers never seem to age a bit. It almost frightened me."

• • • •

MISS BENNETT is a charming and unaffected young woman, with golden hair and a quick laugh. But she's also an attentive young mother who sees no choice between the demands of her work, and the demands of her children. The children come first.

"I guess it was perfectly awful, of me," she said "but I was more than an hour late for the cocktail party they arranged for the critics. I flew down and Melinda came down on the train. Well, there was some delay; but I simply had to wait until Melinda arrived, because she had a slight cold. And I didn't want to go rushing off, till I'd made sure she was all right.

But the worshipful public doesn't give Hollywood's anointed much of a chance to carry on their private affairs without something of a struggle.

"I'm not having much trouble here in Washington," Miss Bennett said, "because the police have been very helpful. But in Boston—!

"Coming back from the matinee with Melinda, a stranger threw open the cab door and jumped in. He just sat on the floor puffing with excitement. And I didn't want him to jump out, while the cab was in motion, so I said he could ride to the first stop light.

"He was a nice looking youngster, and he looked so frightened at what he'd done, I gave him my autograph. He didn't say anything for a while, but finally he blurted out, 'Do you know Irene Dunne?'

"I told him I did," Miss Bennett said, and then he looked at me admiringly.

"'Gosh, Miss Bennett,' he said 'that is something. Irene Dunne's my favorite actress!'"

Miss Bennett threw back her head and laughed when she told the story, because in addition to having a charming personality, and being a good actress, she's also a darn good sport.

Public Apathy Is Blamed for Highway Risks

Safety Meeting Urges Further Education on Traffic Toll.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 12.—Convinced that efforts to bring a degree of safety to the Nation's highways have failed principally because of public apathy toward traffic problems, newspapermen attending the Commercial Investment Trust Seminar of Safety today ended their five-day conference, pledged to promote safe motoring habits within their own communities.

Since last Monday, when the Seminar opened under auspices of the C. I. T. Safety Foundation, the 50 newspaper delegates have heard talks from virtually every leader in the traffic safety and control field.

"As a result of this frank discussion," said John W. Darr, the foundation's director, "there is every reason to believe that the newpapers of the country will stimulate new leadership and arouse greater public appreciation of the serious traffic problems. There is every hope that safety will be taken off the soapbox and that present conditions will be tackled with new editorial vigor."

Child Teaching Stressed.

At final sessions of the meeting, Marian Telford, director of field activities and consultant on child safety, National Safety Council, stressed the need for continuing safety education—"beginning in the kindergartens and through teacher training institutions."

Pointing out that 21 per cent of all accidental deaths during a recent year involved children between the ages of 5 and 14, Miss Telford urged that traffic safety teaching become compulsory in the country's schools.

Washington's move to establish "traffic clubs" in high schools throughout the city was cited by the speaker as "an example of what can be done to protect youngsters from the traffic menace and at the same time instill the necessity of caution in young minds."

Paul Hoffman, president of Studebaker Corporation and the Automotive Safety Foundation, urged traffic administrators to apply "less heat and more light" to the problem. There is an increasing need, he said, for a rational rather than emotional approach to the solution."

New Rules Predicted.

Within the next few years, Hoffman predicted, every principal city in the country will adopt municipal regulations governing pedestrian traffic. More and more in all sections of the country, he declared, officials are beginning to awaken to the necessity of providing rules to protect pedestrians and safeguard their movements on congested streets.

"We must design foolproof highways and at the same time take the fools off them," said Hoffman. "We will never have adequate safeguards until streets and highways are improved to meet increasing demands of modern motoring."

As the association drew to a close, the newspaper delegates, representing two-score papers, adopted a resolution thanking C. I. T. officials for offering an opportunity to gain first-hand informtaion of the traffic problem as it concerns the Nation.

"It is our sincere hope," the resolution said, "that the information we have obtained will enable us to make a constructive contribution toward the solution of a problem which concerns us all."

Provo, Utah, Nov. 12 (AP).—Bones a farmer uncovered while digging a ditch near here were described by a University of Utah geologist today as those of "an extinct form of elephant covered with 15-inch hair with an undercoat of wool."

"It stood 12 feet high at the shoulders and was much larger than the African elephant," Dr. Frederick J. Pack said.

Roosevelt to Send Congress Special Message Monday

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said yesterday his message to Congress would be sent to the Capitol on Monday, opening day of the special session. He said he had not finished writing it and therefore could not say whether he would enlarge on the legislative program he already has outlined.

Hosford to Retain Coal Board Place

By the Associated Press.

Charles F. Hosford, jr., after a conference at the White House yesterday withdrew his resignation and will remain indefinitely as chairman of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

Hosford made the statement after conferring with Secretary James Roosevelt. Hosford last week turned in his resignation, effective about January 1, because he could not afford to remain in the Government service, denying he was prompted by friction within the commission.

The President later went over difficulties with the entire membership of seven commissioners and at a recent press conference expressed hope Hosford would reconsider his resignation.

In a statement, Hosford yesterday said he would continue "to work with the other commissioners in making minimum prices effective at the earliest possible moment."

Widow to Receive 3-5 by Shelton Will

Mrs. Eloise Sevier Shelton, widow of Harry H. Shelton, an attorney, will receive three-fifths of the income from his $267,775 estate, it was learned in District Court yesterday when a petition for probate of his will was filed.

The estate is to be held in trust by the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., of Baltimore, which is to pay the remaining 40 per cent to a daughter, Mrs. Judith Shelton Weston, of New York City.

The will requested that upon the death of the mother and daughter, the estate was to be halved, one portion going to Mrs. Weston's children and the other to Shelton's brothers and sisters. David R. Shelton, an attorney, filed the papers.

"The Propaganda Shell Game" will be Seldes' topic. Joel Wolfsohn, member of the education committee of the center, will be chairman of the evening.

Seldes' talk is the third of a series of forum events which bring to the center leaders in political, literary, journalistic and interdenominational fields in America.

Britain Offers Bill To NationalizeCoal

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—The government proposed today that the British coal mining industry be operated by the state.

Private operators would be bought out at a cost of $332,250,000, under a bill to be submitted to Parliament.

Floating Dollar Urged to Stay Business Drop

Committee for the Nation Wants Open Gold Market in New York.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 12.—A "floating" dollar, with its value in the world money markets regulated by a flexible price for gold in this country, was advocated as a remedy for the current business slump by the Committee for the Nation in a memorandum to President Roosevelt made public here today by Earl Harding, representative of the committee.

The committee, privately financed and backed by a group of business men, campaigned during the depression for revaluation of the dollar—a step taken by the Roosevelt Administration in 1933 and 1934 with a boost in the domestic price for gold to $35 an ounce from about $20.67. Recently it proposed a further hike in the U. S. price to combat a fall in farm and other basic commodity prices.

Speaking for the committee at the annual convention of the National Grange, Harding predicted another deep business depression unless the fall in commodity prices was corrected by abandonment of the fixed $35 price for the metal set early in 1934.

The memorandum, sent to members of Congress as well as President Roosevelt, pointed out the President had power to raise the domestic price to $41.34 an ounce from $35 without Congressional action. It suggested an open market for gold in New York, patterned after the London market, "in which gold will be treated as a commodity and its price in dollars allowed to fluctuate with demand and supply."

Smith Widow Gets Income of Estate

Mrs. Betty Grove Smith, wife of Emmons S. Smith, who died October 28, was named to receive the income from his $437,600 estate for life, it was disclosed yesterday when a petition for probate of his will was filed in District Court. The estate was made up of $434,000 in real estate and $3,600 in personal property.

The will directed that Woodson P. Houghton be requested to hold the estate in trust. It was provided that if she should die before the two minor children, Emmons S. Smith 3d and Betty Fairfax Smith, become 30, the principal should be turned over to them.

The home at 2216 Massachusetts avenue northwest is to be occupied by the widow and the children. The law firm of Ellis, Houghton & Ellis represented the estate.

Aherne Shines In Actor Role At the Earle

Those golden girls and lads of eighteenth century London and Paris were as modern as those that throng in Manhattan's Fifties. Judging by "The Great Garrick," where the celebrities of the Comedie Francais and the Royal Drury Lane Theater elbow one another with an elegant malice not unakin to the atmosphere of barbed wisecracks depicted by Broadway columnists.

David Garrick, top glamour boy of the London stage, did the present equivalent of leaving Broadway for Hollywood. He accepted an engagement at the great Comedie Francais. Gossip about his high-hat attitude preceded him and the entire troupe of the Comedie Francais laid an elaborate plan to "rib" him. Completely modern this plot, you see, and still in the tradition of stage-stealing.

Brian Aherne does himself highly well as David Garrick. He swaggers and sniffs and struts like a true son of the stage; he makes love with polished insincerity and then falls into his own trap—this luckless Romeo. Best of all, he's really an elegant actor in the role of an actor—a mighty stiffish role.

A Furbelowed Olivia.

The high talents of Olivia de Havilland are constantly overshadowed by her beauty. But never let the little lady's good looks fool you; she's quite an actress, even though crinolined, furbelowed and powdered within an inch of her life.

Quite complicated is "The Great Garrick" story. It's a plot within a plot within a plot, thus outdoing "Hamlet" by one plot. First, there is the story of Garrick going to the Comedie Francais. Second, comes the story concocted by the Comedie Francais troupe with the idea of showing this insufferable Garrick importation. Third, comes the love story occasioned by Garrick's mistaking an innocent bystander, Miss De Havilland, for one of the French Thespians who are striving to "frame" him.

Edward Everett Horton bounces about in wide-skirted coats as Garrick's dresser and valet. He succeeds in being generally amusing, but he does not steal any scenes from the adept Brian Aherne. Luis Alberni has a time for himself as an actor who depicts an insane waiter in the effort to terrorize Garrick. Also highly commendable is the pygmyish old gentleman who plays the prompter.

Lavish settings and costuming add to the pictorial effects, although the poetical landscape gardening surrounding a country inn is on the side of the unbelievable.

Lewis Scores Again.

Ted Lewis, with his ever welcome hot peanuts and even more welcome big and beautiful act, is with us again.

Since the dapper Ted has been unique in his field for so long, it is rather futile to comment on him except to say that like Sarah Bernhardt he seems to get better as he gets older; like Bernhardt he gets younger as he gets older, and unlike Bernhardt, thanks be given, he gives no farewell tours. He's the same young old Ted, with the bounce of a basketball and the suggestive query, "Is everybody happee?" which makes it so hard not to be happy.

A major critical difficulty with Ted yesterday was that he didn't announce the names of his clever performers. This makes it hard to assign proper credits, except to say that they were all just as good as Ted, more especially the sassy little blonde tap dancer in gold and blue and the ebony boy and his high pink dance partner with the superlative pins of whom he properly sang, "She's tops, she's tan, she's terrific." Not to omit the tiny blonde adagio dancer surely compounded of equal parts of chromium steel and the best tire rubber.

But each and all of the Lewis boys and girls were nothing less than splendid and deserve all the pats on the head there are.

Supplementaries of Merit.

Short celluloids at the Earle include a meritorious science subject, depicting the super-streamlined cars we will drive when we get out of our present difficulties with the finance companies, and a dozen other equally interesting angles on progress.

The current newsreel also is a pippin, with views of Il Duce's inamorata, Magda de Fontanges, who plugged her romantic obstruction for a net cost of $3.75. Gosh, it costs us more to park in the wrong place!

"Stand-In" and the Trahans Are Tops On Ne Plus Ultra Bill at the Capitol

Comedy Strikes Keynote on Program of Music, Dancing and Fun.

"STAND-IN." Walter Wanger's picturization for United Artists of a story by Clarence Budington Kelland, adapted to the screen by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, costarring Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell, with Humphrey Bogart, Alan Mowbray, Marla Shelton, C. Henry Gordon, Jack Carson, J. C. Nugent, Tully Marshall and William V. Mong. Directed by Tay Garnett. Presented Tuesday, November 9, at Loew's Capitol Theater.

The sly digs taken by this penetrating comedy at both the studio and Wall Street factions engaged in the free-for-all hazards of motion picture production probably will leave slight imprint—if any—on the consciousness of the lay public. What they will perceive in it is a rich vein of seemingly innocuous comedy, based on a new and completely novel idea.

BELL.

"Stand-In," nevertheless, aims a quiverful of sharp but unpoisoned arrows at prevalent methods of picture-making and the intricate business of the industry's financial set-up that must impress the West Coast in about the same manner as gazing into a looking-glass. It takes as the foundation of its gay and dissecting recital the Colossal Studios, about to be sold down the river by its backers in New York as a bad investment they are glad to write off their books by sale to one Nassau, who magnanimously agrees to pay $5,000,000 for a $10,000,000 property. Mr. Nassau is a wily racketeer in league with a crooked director and a temperamental feminine star, not above feathering her nest, as the saying goes, by being in on the deal. The idea is to make Colossal's last picture a monumental flop so the company will be unable to pay off and the bargain buy will be assured.

An Industrial Engineer.

But in the Wall Street office of Pennypacker & Co. is a young wizard at figures—the mathematical kind—who feels that he may be able to do some good by making a personal survey of the situation in Hollywood. He speaks a language comprised solely of equations, logarithms, charts and graphs. Arrived in Hollywood he falls under the inspiriting guidance of a "stand-in" on the Colossal lot, with a few crows to pick with the powers that be on her own. She has been reduced from opulent juvenile stardom to a mature status a few cuts under that of a well-paid extra.

With that as a starting point, Mr. Atterbury Dodd tackles the job of bringing order out of chaos and a profit out of red ink. He has himself what is colloquially known as a time. When the sale seems to be consummated and he fired, he swings to the side of labor and the downtrodden, commandeers the studio for 48 hours in which to remake "Satan and Sin," making the chimpanzee the star instead of Cheri, the gal with the temperament and two faces, both looking toward the pocketbook, and in the end, of course, marries the stand-in who has been his adviser, secretary and inspiration from the start.

It all sounds a little gooty—and it is—but underlying the farcical aspects of the play's treatment is a solid foundation of possible fact that gives the whole thing substance and the added tang of authentic satirical humor.

Mr. Howard Goes Sennett.

Leslie Howard, as Atterbury Dodd, tosses his dignity to the winds and offers a complete reversal of everything he has ever done for the screen. He even goes Mack Sennett to the extent of getting a lovely black eye and a sound smack in the nose with an over-ripe tomato. This is Leslie Howard we are speaking of, mind you! Joan Blondell, in the title role, casts away no dignity because from first flash to last she has none. But she has a delightful way with her at all times, combining romance, gymnastics and fun in thoroughly palatable proportions.

Humphrey Bogart, for once, is on the right side of the ethical fence, as the honest producer who is in love with his double-crossing star, and Alen Mowbray lends a thick dialect to the director's role of Koslofski. C. Henry Gordon is Nassau, the gentlemanly hoodlum, and Marla Shelton, a newcomer to these eyes, appears as Cheri, the star with the Jesse James complex. They all play as if they enjoyed it and multiply the picture's entertainment value by the versatile cleverness of their caricatures. Many behind-the-scenes studio shots reveal how the acting gentry behaves when at work. All very pungent and punchy.

A Headline Riot on Stage.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is headlined by those incomparable artists and supreme zanies, Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron, in an act that is varied somewhat from their usual routine. Here are two musicians, both vocal and instrumental, of concert stage caliber, who bring to their unchallenged artistry the most gorgeous sense of humor known to the theater. Their activities are dominantly lunatic, but through all of their magnificent clowning shows the stamp of the true artist. I know of no combination on the boards that can approach this one in unique blending of high musical attainment and low comedy—but never too low. Their welcome back was so enthusiastic yesterday that Mr. Trahan had to make a speech. And what a speech!

With Little Jackie Heller again serving as singing master of ceremonies—scoring a substantial hit on his own account—the bill offers also Johnny Barnes, the native lad who has developed into one of the most skillful tap dancers on the stage; the amazing Lia Foun Chinese troupe of gymnasts, contortionists and jugglers, who give a truly remarkable exhibition, and the Janette Hackett Dancers, 12 graceful young women, led by Miss Hackett in a major solo number in the Loie Fuller manner.

Director Koslofski Fixes Focus

This arch-enemy of "art" on the screen is the conniving imported motion picture director who lends a molasses dialect to the rich comedy in "Stand-In," the current attraction on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Underneath the Koslofski makeup the observant reader will recognize the familiar features of Alan Mowbray, an actor to whose versatility there seems to be no end.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 12.—Idol Chatter: Instead of having so many training schools for movie kids, it might be a good idea to have a few for movie kids' mothers. Cecil B. De Mille is willing to wager his last yes-man that Franciska Gaal will become a top-flight star. On the comeback trail: Betty Compson—older, but more beautiful than ever. Never heard anyone call Dick Arlen a great actor—but no one ever mentions him without adding "A swell guy!" No love lost: Grace Moore and Director Josef Van Sternberg.

BETTY COMPSON.

In spite of the high temperatures they seem to be running, any Boulevard betster will give you five to one that Simone Simon and Gene Markey never marry. Height of something or other: casting those pesky Ritz Brothers in a picture that has anything to do with college. There are six William Powells, four Robert Montgomerys and four Grace Aliens in the filmville telephone directory. Hollywood's hobby-horse (wo) men; Fay Wray—blender of exotic perfumes. Shirley Temple's imitation of an interviewer would have all the fan writers blushing—if they knew how.

Jeanette MacDonald is so . . . o . . . proud of the flowering tree by her front door—odd that she has never taken the trouble to find out what it is. Look alikes: Mary Boland and Marjorie Rambeau. Wonder if Director Henry King, piloting his new plane, talks to his instruments as sarcastically as he does to his actors? That dig noise you have been hearing every Saturday afternoon is Joe E. Brown, rooting for the U. C. L. A. football team.

At luncheon in a studio cafe today a group of greats and near greats were recalling the milestones in their careers. I asked Jeanette MacDonald what she considers the real starting point of her career. She thought for a moment and then . . . "A pair of cotton bloomers," she announced, crisply. "I started dancing in a Broadway chorus when I was 14. I was excited about my new job, but only because the stage represented adventure. I had no serious will to excel. But when reported for rehearsal and the other girls saw the cotton bloomers that I wore, they kidded me unmercifully. And right then and there I swore that I would show them. I think I've been trying to show them ever since!"

If ever you visit Paramount, make it a point to have your shoes shined by the studio bootblack. Oscar, a down-South negro whose hair is now a grizzly gray, is one of Hollywood's most interesting characters. He came to Paramount, 17 years ago, as Wallace Reid's valet and, after Wally's tragic death, stayed on to shine the shoes and brush the coats of the studio's other stars. With his shines, he dished out homely philosophies and homely humor. He became Hollywood's first "trouble-listener." Whenever anyone on the lot had to sing the blues, he sang them to Oscar. And usually went away consoled. Two or three years ago, Oscar played a bit in a picture—and played it so well that he now works in half of the studio's productions. But he still haunts his old shoe-shining stand—and he is still the father-confessor to most of the old-line stars in the business. Oscar has made a great success in life by being everybody's friend.

Hollywood is last port of call for the adventurers of the world. They drift here, fall in love with the uncertainties of picture-making, and stay on to do any kind of work they can get. A case in point: The other day I watched an independent company filming war scenes. The featured player who was supposed to drill the "troops" fumbled his commands and the director finally appealed to the extras. "Is there anyone here who knows the German manual of arms?" Out of the ranks stepped a hard-bitten individual. "Guess I might be able to help you," he said, "I served with the Germans in South Africa." I happened to know that extra. He has also served with the French Foreign Legion, with the Spanish against the Riffs, and with a dozen Chinese war lords.

Trans-Lux

While the "March of Time" seems to steal the show at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, the remainder of the bill is replete with beautiful, inspiring, sensational and educational features.

The "March of Time" reveals in splendid sequence the critical situation in Algeria, where the French face prospects of either a Fascist revolt of white colonials or a Moslem uprising of oppressed natives; the work of the United States Secret Service in running down counterfeiters, showing particularly the case of that most famous of all counterfeiters, William Watts, who worked over a period of four years, and a new industrial success story as Manchester, N. H., opens its center of industrial life, the Amoskeag cotton mills, long bankrupt.

The 40 minutes of high lights in the news is studded with every angle of interest. Comprehensive shots are shown of the new plan to feed needy Washington school children nourishing lunches. Down Fifth avenue in New York City we see the grand parade of the massing of the colors, and in direct contrast an interview with Gen. Franco as to his future plans in Spain. Probably the most dramatic incident in the "news" is a farewell few words from the late Ramsay MacDonald with many other scenes from his colorful career. President Roosevelt asks cooperation for the forthcoming unemployment census and interesting pictures pace the progress of aviation through the past decade.

The Australian racing season is opened with the famous Australian Handicap and beautiful skating sequences appear before the camera at Lake Placid, New York. At Salonica, Greece, we see a parade of well-trained troops and modern armament, a display there for peace.

Probably one of the most beautiful and inspiring Technicolor travel talks is that on "Glimpses of Peru." There is, of course, a Silly Symphony cartoon, this time a bit Western, built around "Little Hiawatha."

'Journey's End' As Roberts Meet

"Journey's End" in Roberts meeting.

In other words, Robert Taylor has just met for the first time Robert C. Sherriff, whose famous play, "Journey's End," was responsible for Taylor's embarking on a screen career. It was while appearing as Capt. Stanhope in a Pomona College production of the drama that Taylor was first seen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives and invited to make a screen test. But not until more than four years later, and some 8,000 miles away, did the star meet the playwright.

Sheriff, visiting the British studios at Denham, England, was taken to meet Taylor on the set of "A Yank at Oxford."

"Say, am I glad to know you!" exclaimed Taylor. "If it hadn't been for you, I wouldn't be here now."

Cancels Trip.

Franciska Gaal canceled plans for a boat trip to New York, planned following completion of her role opposite Fredric March in "The Buccaneer," when Producer Arthur Hornblow, jr., disclosed he would need her at once for tests for "Paris Honeymoon," in which she will costar with Bing Crosby.

Stage Play Is Made to Solve Film Problem

'Having Wonderful Time' Is Transformed Into Comedy of Purpose.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Nov. 12.—One of the proudest men in Hollywood today is Director Al Santell, who's putting on celluloid—by indirection—a subject long tabooed by Hollywood, towit:

Should youngsters too poor to marry, marry anyway, or what?

What makes Santell happy is the fact that his film is a comedy of hilarious proportions, which gets its message across so neatly that the censors haven't a chance of attacking it with their scissors.

Leading man is Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who makes love to Ginger Rogers on the veranda of a summer camp, which Radio-Keith-Orpheum has erected in a dense pine woods (partly made of photographs) inside sound stage seven.

The picture is the movie version of Arthur Kober's hit play, "Having a Wonderful Time," which brought to Broadway the heartaches and the smiles of a cheap summer camp in the Adirondacks, patronized exclusively by young folks from New York's Bronx.

Americanized the Original.

"The play was successful largely because of the accents and the racial characteristics of its players," Santell said, while the prop men were arranging imitation pine trees to dapple the rays from an imitation moon upon Miss Rogers' face. "We couldn't make a movie with such a narrow appeal, so we have Americanized our players and made of our play a broad discussion of one of the most pressing problems in the country today, that of the boys and girls sincerely in love—and too poor to take upon themselves the responsibilities of marriage.

"What should they do?

"That's the question we are trying to answer, by indirection."

The set is as elaborate as it is surprising. It shows both the interior and exterior of Camp Kare Free, made of logs outside, cheaply furnished within, and set in a grove of gigantic trees. The trees in the foreground are of papier mache, with real limbs cut from real trees carefully attached thereto.

Behind them, plastered on the wall, are photo murals of an actual woods at Lake Arrowhead, Calif., where the company shot location scenes. These murals are life size and screened with a curtain of filmy black gauze. The camera sees them, and so will you, as real.

Real or Reel?

R-K-O is complacent about revealing these secrets of the trade, because it made a large part of the picture in an actual wilderness—and it defies movie audiences to distinguish the outdor forest from the inside, steam-heated one!

Miss Rogers, who proved in the film, "Stage Door," that she can act as well as she dances, wears a white organdie dress and blue ribbons in her hair. She's doing a love scene with Fairbanks, and doing well, except for a big fly that buzzes through the artificial moonlight near her nose. Santell finally captures the fly and production continues. (Being filmed is the big dramatic moment of the picture, so in fairness to you we'll tell you no more about it.)

Young Fairbanks, who is tall and curly-headed and blue-eyed, looks surprisingly like his celebrated father, even though his mustache is invisible. It's covered with grease paint. Were it a little more luxuriant—and black—he'd be a dead ringer for the elder Fairbanks in the days when the latter was dueling everybody in sight, jumping off railroad trains, and climbing to ladies' balconies.

"My biggest acting problem," the son said, "has been not to appear too much like him. I have tried to steer clear of the stunts and stick to the romantic, because I've wanted to develop a screen personality of my own. I don't want people to say that I seem to be trying to imitate my dad."

Junior Is Only an Actor.

Young Fairbanks, who is fancy free since his short-lived marriage to Joan Crawford, said he still was an actor and nothing more, despite the publicity he has received as a producer of British films.

"I don't know how those stories started," he said. "Of course, I did have hopes of getting controlling interest in one of the British companies, but I never was able to manage it. How my hopes turned into the printed word is something that I still can't understand."

Metropolitan

Romping into its fourth consecutive downtown week, and third on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, "The Awful Truth" discloses no abatement in public interest or in the hilarious fun which it affords.

This Columbia Pictures comedy, starring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, with a productive band of comics of both genders in support, is the season's model of its kind. Visualizing a marital mixup that sprang from trivial deceptions on the part of both a beautiful young wife and her handsome husband, the movement of the picture progresses at breakneck speed from the very outset.

The story is a gay and decorous one, suitable for all members of the family, that is barbed with spontaneous and delightfully crisp speeches, countless touches of unusual "business" and camera work that realizes every possibility of an immensely amusing script.

In addition to the inspired funmaking of the costars, important contributions to an unbeatable ensemble are made by Cecil Cunningham, Ralph Bellamy, Alexander D'Arcy, Joyce Compton and numerous others, not forgetting "Mr. Smith," the canniest wire-haired terrier that ever faced a camera.

If there is anyone in Washington who hasn't seen this laughter classic by now, he should be getting about it.

The supplementary program is being carried along with the feature at the Met., with new newsreels added from week to week.

Sign Comedienne.

Patricia Wilder, the Honey Chile of radio renown, has been added to the cast of "The Big Broadcast of 1938," in which she will appear with her microphone partner, Bob Hope, who is playing one of the leading roles in the W. C. Fields starring production.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Nov. 12.

AMBITION: Some up-State political leaders, impressed with LaGuardia's victory in the mayoralty election, approached him the other day with a proposition for him to be a candidate for Governor. . . . LaGuardia turned it down. "I've learned this," he explained. "I won't take a step—backward."

• • • •

ADVICE: William Gaxton, who was President Wintergreen in Sam Harris' production of "Of Thee I Sing," and who also appeared in the unsuccessful follow-up, "Let 'Em Eat Cake," met George M. Cohan, who portrays the president in "I'd Rather Be Right." . . . "As one president to another," Cohan greeted, "what advice have you to offer?" . . . "Just this," Gaxton replied. "Don't let 'em write you a sequel!"

• • • •

ROMANCE: W. P. Lipscomb, author of the Pepys play, "Ninety Sail," and who stepped into the leading role in England, when the star suddenly became ill, had promised his wife that if the play's a hit, he'd buy her some jewelry. . . . Last week, when it appeared definite that the play's a hit, he told Mrs. Lipscomb that she can go to the jewelry places to get some idea of what she wants . . . Four hours later she returned. "Well, where've you been?" Lipscomb asked . . . "To the Tower of London," she informed, "to see the Crown Jewels."

• • • •

QUERY: Marc Connelly met William Faulkner, the novelist, who now is engaged in screen work, and was puzzled by the title of Faulkner's story, "Light in August" . . . "That's a strange title," Connelly asked. "What does it mean?" . . . Faulkner hesitated, puffed his pipe, pondered, and then slowly explained: "Oh, it's just about the light we have in August."

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: The front pages this week were devoted to the plight of Brad Greene, the enlisted sailor who wrote the score for the forthcoming musical, "Right This Way." The story concerned a letter, addressed to President Roosevelt, written by Grace MacDonald, asking for help in securing Greene's discharge from the Navy, inasmuch as they're both very much in love, here's his big chance, etc. . . . As a matter of fact, this front-page stunt was conceived by Monte Proser, who is press agent not only for "Right This Way," but also for Dancer Grace MacDonald.

• • • •

PLIGHT: Garson Kanin, who is directing "Too Many Heroes," which opens at the Hudson Theater next week, worked very late Monday night. He awoke early the next morning and, without stopping to shave, rushed from his home. He met Sam Levene of "Room Service," who asked: "Where are you going?" . . . "I'm on my way to the Hudson," Kanin panted . . . Levene stared at Kanin's two-day growth of beard, and tired eyes, and asked: "River or Theater?"

• • • •

WEALTH: Papa Dionne, father of the quins, who has been visiting New York, is surrounded by two bodyguards. . . . He wears $50 shoes, $150 suits, etc. Dionne, nevertheless, confided that he's saving most of his money. And his real purpose in visiting New York was to consult attorneys with a view toward starting a law suit against the Canadian government next year for taking his five breadwinners away from him.

• • • •

REVENGE: The Independent Movie Exhibitors who play the M.-G.-M. pictures on a percentage basis are protecting themselves against possible loss of business because of radio competition. On the nights when M.-G.-M. is on the air with its new program, the exhibitors present M.-G.-M. pictures in their theaters—thus making that studio share in any resultant losses.

• • • •

LOVE: Sunday evening Jack Doyle was introduced to a socialite at El Morocco who told Doyle that he was coming to England shortly. "That's fine," Doyle said. "And don't forget to look me up. Look me up any time." . . . "Sure," the blueblood returned. "Any time—I need a third for a triangle."

• • • •

CELEBRATION: Georgie Jessel learned of the plans being made for an Eddie Cantor week, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into show business. "A whole week," Cantor enthused to him. "Imagine, the Fourth of July gets only one day, but for me—there's an Eddie Cantor week." . . . "For you," Jessel returned, "and Fire Prevention!"

• • • •

TRIUMPH: Sam Goldwyn is hiring Fannie Hurst to write the screen story for Jascha Heifetz, whom he has under contract. Miss Hurst submitted the synopsis and Goldwyn elated over it. . . . "It's such a perfect story," he explained to friends. "It's so simple, too. The story is simply about a beautiful, neurotic lady who loves music!"

• • • •

ART: Although Rockwell Kent has been paid by the Government for the Post Office paintings he did, Kent still isn't content—and refuses to permit the Government to alter that much-discussed phrase he had painted into the completed work. . . . Kent has sent warning that he'll permit no change and will bring suit if any is made. "A publisher," he declares, "can't change a chapter in an author's book, can he?" . . . The artist, however, has offered two conciliatory propositions. The first is to tear out the walls on which the painting was done. He also has suggested six phrases—either one of which could be substituted for the objectionable one. All these were turned down—although they're verbatim quotes from Lincoln and Jefferson.

Home Sweet Home Remains Just That

After searching for several months for another home, Una Merkel, has taken the "for sale" sign down from the lawn of her Hollywood bungalow. Una said after looking at more than 30 houses she realized none of them looked like "home," so decided to remain where she is.

Dance Benefits Episcopal Guild

Charles M. Remey Leads Cotillion Figure at Sulgrave Club.

A cotillion figure led by Charles Mason Remey, chairman of the floor committee, marked one of the high points of the ball last night at the Sulgrave Club for the benefit of the guild of Grace Episcopal Church. A stunning effect was made by the fluttering Japanese fans carried in the cotillion by the ladies who had received them as souvenirs.

As the clock struck twelve, the Marion Chace Dancers stepped out for a floor show that brought a round of applause. Then after refreshments were served in the dining room, the ball continued until the small hours, with everybody remaining until the last saxophone blew.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde of Grace Church received the guests, assisted by his niece, Mrs. Susan Ginguard Sparks, of Columbia, S. C., who wore blue and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Strickland Gillan arrived with friends whom they had entertained at dinner preceding the ball.

Among the many guests glimpsed during the evening were Gen. and Mrs. Fred Coleman, Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil and their debutante daughter, Miss Carolyn Cecil, Maj. and Mrs. Richard D. LaGarde, Maj. and Mrs. Davis B. Wills, Col. and Mrs. Ellis B. Miller, Miss Neitah King, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Price, Mr. and Mrs. William Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker Holcomb, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens.

Bernard Braloves On Wedding Tour

Following their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bralove, whose marriage took place last Saturday, will live in Philadelphia, where Mr. Bralove practices law.

The bride is the former Miss Edith Karasick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Karasick, of Mount Vernon, N. Y. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Bralove, of Washington.

Their wedding took place in the home of the bridegroom's parents on Taylor street, with Dr. Abram Simon officiating. Later there was a buffet supper.

Mr. Bralove is a graduate of the Devitt School, Rollins University and Harvard Law School. His bride finished the Fieldston School, in New York, and Wellesley College.

At Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Overman, of New York, will be at the Wardman Park Hotel for several days.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

CECIL, VISCOUNT OF CHELWOOD, Right Honorable Edgar Algernon Robert Gascoyne Cecil, who with the Viscountess Cecil is spending the week-end at the White House, has held even more public offices than he has names. Washingtonians sometimes get a bit blase on the subject of distinguished visitors, as we have so many of them, but Viscount Cecil is really somebody to get excited about.

DUDLEY HARMON.

He is perhaps best known for his work on behalf of the League of Nations, of which he is listed as a "prominent protagonist." He was once awarded the Woodrow Wilson peace prize.

The "Right Honorable" somewhere near the middle of Viscount Cecil's name means that he is a member of the privy council, an honorary office sometimes given to former cabinet members and persons distinguished in private life. A graduate of Eton and Oxford, he started his career as a lawyer, and later served as private secretary to his famous father, the Marquess of Salisbury, when the latter was premier of England. He has also been undersecretary for foreign affairs.

Viscount Cecil is in this country on a mission for the Church Peace Union. He recently spoke in Boston on a program with the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, and will be in Washington until Monday. The viscountess who is described as "just a wife," taking little active part in public affairs, is a daughter of the second Earl Durham. During their stay here they are being entertained by the President and by the English Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, who will give an "all British" dinner at the Embassy tonight for the viscountess.

* * * *

ANOTHER BRITISH visitor, of quite different type, is the Duchess of Westminster, who is now mingling gaily with cafe society in New York. Unlike some of her titled countrymen, who descend on New York and Palm Beach in droves every year, the duchess is making her first stay on our shores.

The other afternoon found the duchess executing a graceful Big Apple at a party given by Prince Serge Obolensky at the Maisonette Russe in the St. Regis. After she had discarded her hat, according to an onlooker, the duchess proved to be the best Big Appler in the company, which included Cecil Beaton, British photographer, and the Marquise de Polignac.

* * * *

PERHAPS THE DEPRESSING behavior of the stock market these days is responsible for the fact that many socially prominent women are taking a greater and more practical interest in their financial affairs than ever before. Anyway, the New York Junior League is starting again its series of lectures, begun several years ago, on financial subjects. The opening lecture will be given November 23 by Thomas D. Thacher, former Solicitor General, on the subject, "The Supreme Court and Its Relations to the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Government." The second lecture is, quite simply titled for a so complicated subject, "Gold."

Now that President Davis of National Park College has inaugurated a course in practical finance among the young lady students there, perhaps the idea will spread further in Washington. Surely the Capital Junior League should be interested, having the whole Treasury to pick its speakers from.

* * * *

Senora de Pastoriza Plans Tea Wednesday

Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister, will entertain on Wednesday afternoon at the first in a series of teas she plans to give during the winter.

Assisting her will be Senora de Boyd, wife of the Panamanian Minister; Senora de Godoy, Senora de Tudela, Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Mrs. J. E. McLure, Mrs. Thomas Watson and Mrs. Parker West.

Chicago Mayor Here.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago is stopping at the Carlton Hotel during his stay in Washington.

Col. C. S. Ridley, Wife Will Embark Tuesday

Col. C. S. Ridley, governor of the Panama Canal, now in Washington at the Mayflower with Mrs. Ridley, will sail from New York on Tuesday for Balboa Heights. Their visit here this time is a brief one, but they plan to return to the Capital sometime in January.

Col. Ridley succeeded Col. Julian L. Schley, who now is at Fort Belvoir, Va.

At the Mayflower.

Dr. and Mrs. Ludvig Hektoen, of Chicago, i., Washington for an indefinite stay, are occupying an apartment at the Mayflower. Dr. Hektoen is executive director of the National Advisory Cancer Council.

Middleburg Races to Attract Famous Visitors, Many Entries

Traditional Meet Today Has Greatest List of Jumpers in History; Many Gala Social Affairs Planned.

The thrilling, pounding thud of hoofs, a wonderful sound to horse lovers, will echo through Virginia hills at Middleburg, Va., today, as the fall race meet is held on the estate of Mr. Daniel C. Sands. Hunting gentry from many parts of the country will be present to see the course, which is in perfect condition and is one of the most picturesque in the country, situated as it is amid the rolling foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

With the greatest list of entries ever received here, the six-race card promises to afford high entertainment from start to finish. Society people from all nearby cities in large numbers will see some of the best steeplechase horses in America try their mettle over the rolling Glenwood course.

Probably the best known horse in the entire list is the aged Ostend, belonging to Frank M. Gould, of New York, who is slated to go to the post in the R. Penn Smith Challenge Plate, a 3½-mile race over timber. The great horse has a long list of cups to his credit, including the Virginia Gold Cup, the Rose Tree Challenge Cup, the Radnor Hunt Cup and the Long Island Cup.

Many Parties Planned for Day.

The big race of the day will be the Glenwood National Steeplechase, which is a 3-mile brush over 20 big duPont-designed jumps. This has a purse of $1,000 added and a valuable plate as a prize. The outstanding horse in this lot is F. Ambrose Clark's Sunny Thoughts, last year's winner and a splendid brush horse. Mrs. Clark also has an entry in this race, Eastern Shore. Eleven will go to the post in this race.

Although horses are the chief interest of the day, many other attractions are planned for the large number of society and sporting persons expected to attend. There will be week-end house parties at all country estates in the neighborhood, and other parties scheduled for every waking hour.

The largest affair in connection with the meet will be the luncheon which Miss Charlotte H. Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft School and joint M. F. H. of the Middleburg Hunt, will give preceding the races today. Approximately 85 guests, including the officials of the races, many noted horse owners and guests from Washington and Richmond will be present. Among the officials at the luncheon will be Mr. D. C. Sands, owner of the course, and Mrs. Sands; Mr. W. H. Lipscomb, president of the Loudoun Hunt; Mr. Fletcher Harper, M. F. H. Orange County Hunt, and Dr. A. C. Randolph, M. F. H. Piedmont Hunt, who are the judges; William A. Metzger, timer; Algernon S. Craven, National Steeplechase and Hunts Association, F. Ambrose Clark, W. Plunket Stewart and William duPont, jr., stewards of the meet; Thomas Rodrock, paddock judge, and others who are in charge of the affair.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark will attend the luncheon with Mr. Clark, and many other prominent horsey-minded persons will be among the 85 or more guests present.

Arthur Whites To Give Luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White are among those who will entertain at informal luncheons today, and, as usual, there will be several Washingtonians on their list of guests.

Mrs. Raymond Belmont will entertain a number of friends at tea following the program. Miss Laura Sprague is entertaining at tea, Mrs. Duncan Read will have a tea, as will Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin and Mrs. H. D. Whitfield.

Mrs. T. B. Davis is entertaining at a dinner later in the evening, and Mrs. W. C. Langley will entertain at luncheon preceding the races.

Mrs. George Mason, of Colonial Beach, Va., will be a guest of Miss Mildred Russell for the races.

* * * *

Virginia Kincaid Becomes Bride

Wedding to Carl Taylor Staged at Church of the Pilgrims.

Wearing an attractive black costume suit with a gray squirrel jacket, set off with gardenias, Miss Virginia Caroline Kincaid, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Kincaid, of this city, became the bride of Carl Welch Taylor, of Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Taylor, of Huntington, W. Va., at a very simple ceremony early yesterday morning at the Church of the Pilgrims.

The Rev. Andrew Bird officiated.

The couple will make their future home in Huntington, W. Va.

In addition to the father and mother of the bridegroom, those present from out-of-town were Miss Mary Rebecca Groves, of Charles Town, W. Va.; Dr. E. Taylor, of Cleveland, Ohio; Roberta Kincaid, and Jack Pedigo, of Hampden-Sydney College, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., and is a member of Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority. The bridegroom also attended Marshall College and in addition is a graduate of West Virginia University.

Jeanne Dorsch Is Entertained

Wedding to T. J. Fitzgerald, Jr., to Be Nov. 20 at Shrine of Sacred Heart.

Among the many pre-nuptial parties to be given for Miss Jeanne Dorsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Michael Dorsch, whose marriage to Thomas J. Fitzgerald, jr., will take place November 20 in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, is a luncheon which will be given by Miss Mary Jane O'Donnell today; a tea tomorrow afternoon by the bride-to-be's mother, and a buffet supper this evening by Miss Anne de Beaupre Beach. Miss Mary T. Donohoe will give a luncheon on Tuesday at the Shoreham.

Miss Frances Fitzgerald, sister of the bridegroom-elect, already has entertained for Miss Dorsch at a shower; Miss Nell Clements was hostess for Miss Dorsch at a luncheon last Satuday, and last Sunday Mrs. Eris W. Tattersall gave a cocktail party.

* * * *

The officers and executive committee of the Inter-American Horse Show Association, Inc., already are thinking about next year. With that in mind, they will meet—with cocktails—Tuesday, November 23, at the home of Nathaniel Horace Luttrell, 2001 Connecticut avenue.

Rrom 5 to 7 in the afternoon they will discuss the recent show and make preliminary arrangements for the 1938 event.

* * * *

Book Week Observed by Moose Unit

Women Sponsor Shower to Collect New Books for Boys' Home.

Delegations From Arlington and Annapolis Visit Local Chapter.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

National Book Week was celebrated in a practical way last night by Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, which sponsored a book shower for Mooseheart library in connection with its regular meeting. The books, all new and selected for boys between the ages of 8 and 12 years, will be sent to Dixie Hall, the home of 16 boys who are proteges of the local chapter.

The program of the meeting was in charge of Mrs. William Sullivan, library chairman, who presented Mrs. Helen Steinbarger, of the Public Library, as guest speaker. Mrs. Sullivan reviewed the origin of Book Week and its purpose, and Mrs. Steinbarger discussed a variety of new books. Members of the chapter responded to roll call with quotations from famous authors on the value of books.

The book shower here was one of many held throughout the Nation by the Women of the Moose for Mooseheart library. Like other activities for Mooseheart, this is Nation-wide in its scope. Every year all the chapters follow such a plan, replacing worn-out volumes and adding new ones to the main library of the children's city and to the book shelves of the individual cottages in which the children make their homes.

In order to supply whatever need there may be for special books and to avoid choosing at random, perhaps unwisely, the chapters communicate with the librarian and the cottage "parents" at Mooseheart, who supply lists offering suggestions as to what will be most welcome.

Last night, besides being the time of the Book Week program, was the occasion of the visit of delegations from the Annapolis and Arlington Chapters. Despite the rain about 30 came from Annapolis, headed by their senior regent, Mrs. John Kramer.

Mrs. Baldwin, as senior regent of Columbia Chapter, Mrs. Hans Sorenson, past regent, and Mrs. William Pythian, recorder, welcomed them.

At the close of the program a buffet supper was served by a committee including Mrs. Calvin Giles, junior regent; Mrs. Emile Rada and Mrs. H. J. Clark, treasurer of the chapter. The table was decorated with yellow and rust chrysanthemums.

Kappa Delta Pi Sets Conference

Problems of 3 Specialized Fields in Education to Be Discussed.

Its purpose is to give the juniors and seniors of the college an opportunity to discuss with those already in service the problems of the three specialized fields of education for which Wilson prepares its students Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, will address the group at luncheon.

The conference will be opened in the auditorium of the college building at 11 a. m., by Dr. Edgar C. Higbie, president of the college. Group conferences, each being held in a separate part of the college, will follow. The kindergarten-primary conference has as its topic, "The Beginning Teacher in the Classroom." Under this will be discussed orientation, reading readiness and the growth and development of the teacher. Members of the panel include Dr. Julia Hahn, Mrs. L. C. Walker, Miss Bernice Bothwell, Miss Virginia Ladd, Miss Florence Huhn, and Miss Lorraine Craig.

The intermediate conference, under the leadership of Miss Virginia O'Neil, Miss Grace Lind, Mrs. Frances Wolowitz, Miss Genevieve Mensh, Miss Margaret Berger and George Butler, will discuss "Some Significant Factors in Evaluating Desirable Classroom Situations."

Criteria for evaluating classroom work and problems in relation to the criteria will be emphasized.

Under the topic "The Junior Highschool Teacher?" and "How Can the Administration Maintain the Maximum Efficiency of the Teaching Staff." Miss Bertie Backus, Hugh Smith, Miss Anne Cochrane, Miss Rose Lewis and David Teeple make up the panel.

Following the group conferences, there will be a joint meeting in the auditorium to share the results of the various discussions. Luncheon will be served at 12:45.

Gettysburg League Gets Report of Convention

The Woman's Gettysburg League met yesterday at Luther Place Memorial Church for luncheon and to hear reports of the annual convention last weekend at Gettysburg.

Mrs. Rufus Weaver is president of the league which devotes itself to assisting Gettysburg College, one of the oldest in the country. Only for the past three years has it admitted women to its classes.

The report on the conference was given by Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard, wife of Maj. Rinard, who attended as a delegate from the local league.

Women's Groups Plan More Philanthropic Projects

Wife of Christian Endeavor President to Be Feted Tuesday; World Tour With Husband Recalled.

Mrs. Daniel A. Poling, wife of the president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will be guest of honor Tuesday at a reception being given at the new headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, 1751 N street, in connection with the annual meeting of the Alumni Fellowship of the organization.

The first Christian Endeavor Society was formed here 52 years ago. Evidence of its universal character lies in the fact that the first society in Washington was started in a colored Congregational Church. Within five years, there were groups in Baptist, Christian, Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches and soon the movement spread to the Luthern and Episcopal congregations, established as interdenominational as well as interracial and international. Dr. Francis E. Clark, of Portland, Me., founded it in 1881.

The Alumni Fellowship was founded shortly after the World War by Dr. Poling. At the organization meeting, held at Calvary Baptist Church, Percy S. Foster, of National Baptist Memorial Church, was elected president. His successors in the office include Irving L. Koch, of Luther Place Memorial Church; Maj. Guy Withers, of National City Christian Church; Miss Monette Hallam, of Calvary Baptist Church; Merritt L. Smith, of Sherwood Presbyterian Church, and D. Roland Potter, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Within four years after the organization of the first C. E. Society at the Lincoln Memorial Congregational in 1885, 21 additional groups were in existence. These met in 1889 and formed the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Union. The first president was W. H. H. Smith. Miss Frances Sangster, the only girl among Mr. Smith's 35 successors, now is secretary to Dr. Poling. David Heyward, of Eckington Presbyterian Church, now is president.

Mrs. Poling recently accompanied her husband on a world tour in the interest of Christian Endeavor. She found progress hampered in Russia and Germany by the current political situation, but Italy's C. E. community is flourishing, she reports.

Dr. Poling will speak in Washington November 28 on a Town Hall program.

D. C. Daughters of 1812 Will Hear Gen. Fries

The D. C. Daughters of 1812 will hear an address by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries this afternoon at their monthly meeting at national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue.

Mrs. Lane Schofield, District president, will preside at the business meeting at 3 o'clock, and the program will be at 4. Hostesses will include Mrs. Katherine P. Billings, Mrs. Andrew Johnson and Mrs. Robert C. Mackinon.

Mt. Holyoke Club to Meet.

Members of the Mount Holyoke Club of Washington and alumnae of the college in and near Washington will hear talks on Haiti and Brazil at the opening meeting of the club today. The meeting will be held at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Ruth Stauffer, 6 Midhurst road, Silver Spring, Md., and will be followed by a tea. The comments on Haiti and Brazil, gleaned from summer travels, will be made by Misses Eleanor Neill, Helen Demond and Elsie Brown.

Trinity College Ball Successful

Mrs. P. J. McGovern Presides at Distinguished Affair at Mayflower.

Mrs. Peter John McGovern, president of Trinity College Auxiliary Board, was chairman of the successful ball and card party given by the board last night at the Mayflower Hotel. The affair was attended by members of the college senior class as well as resident Washingtonians.

Wives of several of the Ambassadors in the Capital are members of the auxiliary board, including Mme. Aranha, wife of the Brizilian Ambassador, Countess Van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador. All were on the list of distinguished patrons and patronesses for last night's affair—a list which included high church dignitaries and representatives of official and professional life in Washington.

The girls of the college assisted in preparation for the ball, which was announced by attractive posters made by Miss Agnes Quinn and her committee.

Proceeds of the affair will go to the Anna Hanson Dorsey scholarship fund, which has already helped many young women of the District finance their educations at Trinity.

State Societies Planning Fetes

Several of the State societies of the Capital are resuming their programs of activity just as Congress opens its special session. Next Wednesday the parade of parties will be led off by Massachusetts with a dance and entertainment in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel. Mayors of the various cities of the Old Bay State, here for the national conference, will be guests of honor.

Thursday night, the North Carolina Society will honor the Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. Clyde R. Hoey at a recreation and dance at the Shoreham Hotel. Gov. Hoey, who will address the guests in a talk to be broadcast at 10:30, will be introduced by Senator Robert B. Reynolds. Other members of the Congressional delegation also are expected to be present.

The Georgia State Society has skipped a night and chosen Saturday for its annual Congressional dance at the Shoreham Hotel, welcoming members of its Congressional delegation back to the Capital.

Clark Cole is chairman of the reception committee, assisted by Leonard Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Little, Miss Annabel Matthews, Miss Agnes Reynolds, Miss Ina D. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sommerkamp, M. C. Tarver, jr., Joe Underwood, Miss Thelma Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Roy North.

The Massachusetts Society's bridge classes meet each Thursday evening at 8 in the Roosevelt High School, with Mrs. Marian Barre as instructor. There are classes for beginners as well as advanced players, with John O'Toole, chairman.

The first Massawa Town meeting was held last Monday evening at the Wardman Park Hotel, and the next will be November 29.

Civic Leaders Dinner Guests

Women Voters Arrange Function at Y. W. C. A. in Capital.

Prominent civic leaders will be among the guests Wednesday night at the semiannual dinner meeting of the voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters in the Y. W. C. A., at which there will be a symposium on national representation for the District.

Among those who have accepted invitations are Frederic William Wile, Miss Gwen Geach, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Street, Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Miss Mary Steele, Mrs. Clark Warburton, Mrs. William Kittle, Mrs. L. B. Swormstedt, Miss Constance Roach, Mrs. Thomas Howerton and Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith.

Members of the national board, which will open its sessions Monday at the Powhatan Hotel, also will be present for the dinner. The symposium is attracting wide interest in Washington because of the importance of the issue with which it deals.

"An Independent Board of Education" will be the subject of a report by Mrs. William Savin, chairman of the department of government and education of the District league meeting of her department Tuesday. She will review the history of the District of Columbia Board of Education and discuss the present and proposed methods of choosing its members and directing its policies. The meeting will be held at 10 a. m. in the clubrooms of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, chairman of the department of Government and economic welfare, held a special meeting this week of the committee of volunteers who are working on a survey of relief and unemployment in the District. The members reported on the progress of the survey and discussed future plans.

Regular meetings of the department are held on the first Monday of each month at noon at the Smorgasbord, 1622 K street.

Three study groups of the department of Government and foreign policy will meet during the coming week. Mrs. Benjamin Wallace's group will meet at her home, 3112 South Dakota avenue northeast, on Wednesday, at 2 p. m. Motion pictures will be shown of parts of China where war is now going on and Mrs. Wallace will read letters received since the outbreak of hostilities from friends in China.

A second foreign group will meet on the same date at the home of Mrs. M. C. Lorenz, 3510 Porter street, for discussion of the Sino-Japanese war, the Brussels conference, the Italian-German-Japanese pact, the situation in Spain, and on other developments in Europe. A third group will meet at the apartment of Dr. Edith L. Allen, at the La Salle, Connecticut avenue and L street northwest, on Thursday, at 8 p. m. This group under the leadership of Mrs. C. S. Duncan and Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, will also discuss developments in the Far East and in Europe.

TOMORROW at 12:30 the Washington branch of the Women's Overseas Service League will have its annual Armistice Breakfast in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel. All women who served overseas during the World War are eligible to attend. Miss Mabel T. Boardman, of the Red Cross; Mrs. Carroll Greenough and Mrs. Laura Waters will be guests of honor and speakers. Mrs. Greenough will tell of the memorial library at Louvain, Belgium, designed by her husband to replace that destroyed during the war. Mr. Greenough was engaged by Whitney Warren as supervising architect and he and his wife were there two years during the building of the library.

Mrs. Waters will describe her trip to Russia last summer.

Mrs. Annis Ewell, who served with the British Red Cross overseas, is in charge of reservations for this year's luncheon and Mrs. N. O. Tribble is directing arrangements for the program. Mrs. Wallace W. Chiswell, the president, will preside and Mrs. Harriet Franke, retiring president, will also be present.

Two of the league's distinguished members in Washington will be unable to attend the breakfast. They are Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who entertained members at a garden tea at Dumbarton Oaks last summer.

* * * *

REPRESENTATIVE VIRGINIA JENCKES, of Indiana, is to speak next Friday morning at the meeting of the National Defense committee of the D. C. D. A. R., in the Mayflower Hotel, at 10:30. She will talk on one of the subjects near to her heart—the need of awakening the women of the country to influences which would undermine our Government and of working to counteract them. Representative Jenckes is a member of the District Committee and will refer to national representation for the District. Mrs. Tonnis Holzberg is chairman of the D. C. Committee on National Defense.

MRS. MALCOLM DOUGLAS, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, is beginning to wonder whether or not she is a "jinx" for elevators. A few days ago in the hotel where she stays in Indianapolis while she is at national headquarters there, the lift was out of order. She walked eight floors down to breakfast, forgot to take her hat and coat, and had to go back up after them and down again.

Thursday night, following the dinner in her honor at the Army and Navy Club, one of the elevators there dropped two or three floors and bumped at the bottom surprising the passengers but not injuring them. The results was, she and some of the auxiliary officers were obliged to go down in the freight elevator from the seventh floor dining room, discovering the mysteries of the kitchen as they passed through it on the way to the elevator entrance.

Mrs. Douglas wore a handsome gown of silver, brocaded in turquoise and gold—perhaps one she bought in Paris on her recent trip abroad. Her attractive daughter, Jean, who was with her during her stay in the Capital, wore a long-sleeved dinner dress of moss green satin.

Jean, by the way, is studying dramatic art at Mme. Darkanova's School in New York City and is sharing an apartment there with Frances Farmer, who won success on Broadway last season. The two girls were classmates at the University of Washington, where the school of dramatic art operates two full time theaters. Jean returned to New York yesterday while her mother went to Indianapolis to guide the activities of the auxiliary. It has gained 26,000 members during the past year and looks forward to a membership of 500,000 before this year is over.

* * * *

Also a visitor in Washington during Mrs. Douglas' stay here was Mrs. William R. Reed, of Venita, Okla., past department president of that State, who likewise was in Europe with the Legion Auxiliary delegation and is now on her way home. Mrs. Douglas notified her Thursday night of her appointment as chairman of junior activities for the national organization.

THE P. E. O. SISTERHOOD in Washington has organized a round table for the chapters in the District with Mrs. Warner W. Stockberger as chairman; Mrs. Rush B. Lincoln, vice chairman, and Mrs. John W. Frizzell, secretary.

The plan was suggested at a luncheon given by Mrs. Stockberger for presidents of all the chapters. In addition to the round table officers, the presidents are Dr. Ella R. Fales, who heads the D. C. group; Mrs. Roy C. Potts, Mrs. Eugene H. Pitcher, Mrs. William L. Mattock, Miss Myrtle Seidler, Mrs. R. O. Kluge, Mrs. F. F. Elliott, Mrs. Bert Peck, Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, Mrs. Helen Brundage and Mrs. Clifford A. Betts.

Sigma Kappa Plans Founders' Banquet

The annual founders' day banquet of Sigma Kappa will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Highlands, on Connecticut avenue and California street. The members of both the Washington alumnae chapter and Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa at George Washington University will attend the celebration honoring the five women students who founded Sigma Kappa 63 years ago at Colby College, Waterville, Me.

The committee on arrangements consists of Mrs. DeWitt Bennett, chairman; Mrs. Donald Saunders, Miss Margaret Graves, Miss Helen Middleton, of the alumnae chapter, and Miss Peggy Foote and Miss Marjorie Moorman, of Zeta Chapter. Miss Katherine Scrivener will act as toastmistress.

The banquet will be followed by the annual roll call meeting of the alumnae chapter. These events serve as Sigma Kappa's part of the homecoming activities of George Washington University.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a divorcee, 24, attractive, popular with men and women and I have a secure position which makes me entirely independent financially. My background is that of thousands of other average Americans. My parents taught me the value of honesty and schooled me to believe what others said unless there was proof positive to the contrary. Men have been particularly attracted to me and from my teens I have always had eligible and attractive men friends, but I believed them too readily and I married one who taught me how insincere a man can be.

* * * *

Later, I was engaged to another man whom everyone considered a marvelous person and I was sure I had been wrong in thinking most men were insincere. After about a year's acquaintance I stumbled, by chance, on the fact that my fiance had been having an affair with another girl while professing his undying affection for me. I broke the engagement and even my dearest friends are still wondering why. They think he is a very honest, honorable and upright citizen.

* * * *

Since then I have dated almost every man of my acquaintance. I have been on blind dates with business men from out of town and with husbands whose wives thought they were playing poker at the club. I'm sure there are hundreds of wives in this town who would be quite surprised to know their husbands never reach "the club" and had no intention of going there when they left home. In the last six months, I have developed a complete contempt for men in general, so far as their honesty with women is concerned. Why can't they be fair and play the game straight?

* * * *

Women give up just as much, if not more, than men when they get married, and I believe, from experience, that women are always more faithful than men. Why can't men wake up to the fact that everything they are looking for can be found, and is waiting for them in their own little homes? Why can't they be content with that, instead of seeking happiness or pleasure at the expense of losing things that are truly dear to them?

* * * *

Recently I met a young man who truly attracts me. He seems to have all the qualifications of a good husband and I believe we could be very seriously interested in each other, but it is impossible for me to believe the things he says, and yet my better judgment tells me there is no point in his not being honest with me. But since he has been married before, and has had quite a number of girl friends since, how am I to know that what he says to me isn't his usual line with every woman? I am sure he does not like my attitude. Association with him has caused me to realize how cynical I've become. I have always abhorred cynicism in anyone and am worried about this state of mind in myself.

* * * *

All my life I have wanted to be happily married, with a home and family, but maybe I missed out because I have been too exacting in what I consider an ideal husband, or have tried too hard to be happy. I really want to get married and there are a number of men I could marry, but there seems to be something wrong with each of them, and now that I have met this man I feel I could love, he seems too good to be true. So I end up by doubting him and, of course, no man can care long for a girl who takes that attitude. He wants me to give up other men friends for him, but hasn't actually proposed. I don't think it best to give up all social contacts of that kind unless you are engaged, even though I am very tired of going out with a different man almost every night. And yet I ask myself how we are to discover how much we mean to each other unless we are together constantly.

* * * *

When I think along these lines I seem to be going in circles and I am fully aware of the fact that I need some kind of mental adjustment. But I see so many unhappy marriages that I sometimes think I shall give up the idea and settle down to living alone and trying to like it—although I realize I am not constituted for that kind of life. So what is your advice, Miss Haworth? Everything is so muddled that it seems hopeless to me. These are my innermost thoughts, but I keep up a cheerful front for the most part, with my cynicism breaking through only occasionally. I'm not self pitying; I'm just not happy underneath and I can't seem able to do anything about it myself, although I realize, too, that there are many girls who would give anything to have as much as I have. I have endeavored to give all the salient facts and shall deeply appreciate your answer as soon as convenient. Sincerely, JO.

The Wholesome Attitude.

DEAR JO: The realistic and practicable address to this particular facet of the man-woman relationship consists, I should say, in accepting the man you love for what he is (as you know him) and what he represents himself as being (which is what he would like to become) and making the best of the bargain; rather than in looking with wistful pessimism for the nonexistent ideal and rejecting all and sundry for failing to measure up.

* * * *

Nothing brings the seamier, more disillusioning side of human nature into the open so quickly and defiantly as someone's being on the lookout for it with a spyglass. If, happily, the average woman had the charitable wisdom to aid an abet her man in concealing—to the point of refusing to concede the actual undeniable existence of—his failings, large and small, he might in time attain to well-nigh perfect performance. Why? Because everyone wishes to be either perfect or regarded as perfect. This need of the ego causes most of us constantly to turn a blind eye to our own faults, to lie even to ourselves about our shortcomings, glossing them over and excusing them on this plea or that, and nothing makes us fleeter or stronger in the pursuit of heroic moral and spiritual stature than the glowing conviction that some one person considers us wholly admirable.

When a man fails a given woman, even sorely, she should not only never let him know that she knows he failed her thus, but she should be at some pains tactfully to convince him, in the very hour of his failure, that in her opinion at least he never can and never will fail her. In constantly confronting him with a mirrorlike reflection of himself as he may be and as deep in his heart, he wishes to be, she pulls him out of the mire of present defeat and remorseful discouragement and sends him forward with renewed determination, and unshaken faith in his ability, to externalize his latent, potential, finer self. If, on the contrary, she pounces on him when he's down—when he knows he's done something unworthy of her trust in him—and sneers at or reviles him in the manner of one who says, "Aha, so I've caught you at last. This is what I've always thought or expected, and now I know—" what earthly incentive has he got to try, by action, to redeem himself?

Fine women are traditionally accepted as the inspiration and motivation for outstanding character development in men whose lives they influence. A woman is fine who strives unfalteringly to live her own life in accordance with the highest standards of conduct known to the race, showing by her own example that it can be done, not with ease, not without occasional heartbreak or defeat; who is wise and charitable enough to recognize the frailties and shortcomings of the man she loves as an inherited human handicap and not sheer willful masculine cussedness; who is tactful and understanding enough to avert her eyes from the man's occasional lapses, which shame him at least as much as they pain her; generous enough to recognize the valiancy of his efforts to do his best, even when he fails, and strong and stanchly-believing enough to be gladly willing to lead him spiritually by the hand toward the final goal of expressing his own best self, on the theory that he desires that goal as devoutly as she.

* * * *

If you will stop anticipating and guarding against the worst in men and, instead, strive for nobility of concept and conduct in your own life, I think you will find you can make a pretty fine thing of existence with almost any specimen of average masculine decency as your husband. Your recently-acquired cynicism does not so much argue a strong case against man as he is as it proves you started out in the first place with a fantastically implausible, fairy tale, moonlight-and-roses concept of him. Having come into head-on collision with reality, which was to be expected, you are currently failing to learn anything from that experience. What you should have learned was, not cynicism, but a better understanding and appreciation of life and human nature as it is and must be dealt with. Cynicism, after all, is nothing but the withered and shriveled bloom of romantic idealism. And romantic idealism has nothing in common with genuine, authentic idealism. Romantic idealism is a hothouse theory of life which survives only so long as it is preserved in an ivory tower, far removed from the strong winds of reality. Genuine idealism, which strives to make the very best of things as they are, is another sort of plant which stands four-square to every weather.

Tailored Outfit Holds Own With Elegant Mode

Smart but Comfortable Garments Still Have Place in Wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen.

IN SPITE of the unprecedented trend toward elegance and femininity, there are days when one likes to wear strictly tailored clothes; costumes which are as comfortable as they are smart and which can be worn with nonchalance. Clothes of this type, however, need not be monotonous or uninteresting. Just as much imagination and originality can be put into a tailored outfit as into the more frilly and formal styles.

Hats of the casual classification are not only becoming but definitely flattering this winter; both hats and trimming methods aim to feature a bit of the sparkle and glamor that is everywhere in the current mode. If the tailored hat you select is completely sans romance, then add a dashing long veil to give it character and allure. And, veils are correct with even the most tailored of costumes, according to smart designers and stylists.

Handbags to wear with the suit or casual sort of ensemble, are of various leathers, with suede, calfskin and alligator predominating. They are unusually large, designers feeling that women wish to carry everything but the kitchen sink in their handbags. The huge dimensions, however, do not in any way detract from the style of the new bags—in fact they were never smarter in appearance. In color, they may either match the costume or the other accessories; both ideas are considered correct if cleverly planned.

While the classic slip-on glove is still good style as well as good taste to accompany both tailored and the dressier type of clothes, there is numerous new handwear of the spectator sports classification designed especially for the tailleur. These are both short and long, the choice depending upon personal preference; the "shortie" gloves are first choice of the majority of fastidious women however. Tailored gloves this winter are decorated with stitching or appliques in contrasting leathers. Or they may be completely unadorned. The colored glove vogue has extended to the casual mode, and is sometimes used as the one spot of bright color for an all-dark costume. Whatever method you may choose in ensembling accessories for your tailored or casual clothes, the main considerations should be appropriateness, chic and harmony.

Your Figure, Madame!

Proportion Rather Than Measurement Basis of Figure Beauty, Says Artist.

By Ida Jean Kain.

HOW WOULD you like to look like the heroine of a John La Gatta drawing—one of those beautiful women who help bring the stories to life? Well, you may not be able to make yourself into the counterpart of one of these magazine beauties, but you have a chance to capture that exquisite grace and perfection of figure for which his illustrations are noted.

With Mr. La Gatta the figure is the thing.

"It is possible to idealize the facial features, but it is not possible to draw a good figure from a poor one," he explains. "I think probably the figure is the most important factor in a woman's beauty. Certainly it is the first thing anyone sees about her, and it is not necessary to be an artist or a figure expert to know when there is a lack of proportion."

Skeptical of Standards.

I always have believed it impossible to standardize measurements, as an occasional beauty expert attempts to do. How can height be the gauge of measurements when there is such a variation in structure? Mr. La Gatta says there is no such thing as an exact set of measurements for a particular height. Nor does he believe that only one size is beautiful. It is his contention that, given the correct proportions, any figure can be beautiful. One of his favorite models was a very large girl with a supple, beautiful figure.

If you are in doubt about your own proportions, here is a unique test which Mr. La Gatta uses: Sit on the floor and hug your knees up close to your body. If you can do this gracefully, the chances are that your proportions are perfect. Women with unlovely figures cannot assume this pose gracefully.

"The center of the figure is the center," Mr. La Gatta goes on to say. "There should be just as much height above the center as there is length below it." He objects to the term "long, lovely legs," because if a girl's legs are noticeably long they must be out of proportion.

Hiplines Minimized.

There are tricks to posing a model for a La Gatta illustration. You probably have studied the long, subtle line from shoulder to knee, with a slight curve of the waist and a very slight outcurve of the derriere which distinguishes a La Gatta figure. That line is achieved by a trick that you can do. Mr. La Gatta has his models stand with the lower part of the body a bit forward, not very much—just enough to tuck the hips under where they belong. You can duplicate the effect by pulling up on the lower abdominal muscles, automatically minimizing the hipline.

One thing more—walk on a single line to avoid any side-to-side sway of the hips. Even a wide line seems to produce this swaying of the hips, and you should learn to place one foot directly ahead of the other.

There you have some of the secrets of grace and beauty a great artist has his models put into practice. They are well worth your attention. As for the perfect figure which completes the picture, that is a matter of exercise and more exercise, of the specific kind your figure requires.

Richer Fabrics Feature Blouses

Soft Wools Are Favored by Paris Experts.

Paris (U.P.).—Blouses, those all-important accessories that can make or break the effect of a suit, will be as rich in fabric as the suits with which they are worn this fall and winter.

Satins, brocades, lames, velvets and soft wools are chosen by Paris couturiers for wear with street and afternoon ensembles, the lines in harmony with the silhouette featured at each house.

High necklines draped, stitched with tailored simplicity to form stiffened loops, or tied with dainty bows close to the neck are favored for wear with fur-trimmed afternoon suits. Dark satin blouses with full-length sleeves are worn with light-colored suits, and light ones give contrast with dark suits.

Women Becoming Travel Conscious

New York.—Women are one of the keystones of the $60,000,000-a-year West Indies travel business. Housewives and women office workers, believes Douglas Malcolm, of the American Express Travel Service, are largely responsible for this lusty infant of the travel trade, an industry which, in 1936, took over 187,400 Americans to Bermuda, Cuba, Central America and British, French and American possessions in the nearby Atlantic and Caribbean.

Good salaries in offices and lack of diversified interests at home make American women inveterate travelers, Mr. Malcolm believes. Women formerly were willing at any time to pick up and set off on a journey, as long as that journey took them away from the monotony of house work. Today this group of women travelers is joined by a new type, the young woman who makes a good salary in business and uses part of it for a winter vacation.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 12.

NO LIST of exceptional women compiled here must be minus the name of Rose Livingstone. This little 5-footer, with graying hair, is brought to our attention once more as she receives a silver cup—her eighth award—from Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram for her services in "peace heroism." And she rates a cup as big as the Yale Bowl on her record.

ALICE HUGHES

Thirty-four years ago she came here from Hamilton, Ohio, and was appalled immediately by the perils and terrors to which underprivileged girls in this town are subjected. Tossing thoughts of self aside, she immediately became a one-woman rescue squad. She's no "reformer," in the conventional sense, and, in fact, she eyes that breed pretty sourly as needing reformation themselves. She just wants to help, and she does, often at personal risk.

In fact, she's been stabbed and blackjacked, beaten 22 times and has suffered a broken leg and several broken ribs in line of duty. But Rose has never weakened and has snatched hundreds of girls from the hands of the vice rats here. She lives on $50 a month, provided by a committee of her admirers, in a tenement room on the lower East Side. She sleeps by day, rising at sunset to patrol threatened sectors, notably that surrounding the Brooklyn Navy Yard. She has been known to wear disguises, or even join "gangs" to get evidence.

The life and labors of such a devoted soul bring us all up short. It is wondrous and heartening to realize that such selfless women toil among us on behalf of the forlorn and lost. What's a silver mug to such a person? Nothing beside the thoughtfulness of devoted friends and the gratitude of girls she has aided in the dark and devious reaches of this grim metropolis!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—No name of the colorful woman of yesterday is more in the public eye and ear than that of Lillian Russell, especially since fashions have currently gone turn-of-the-century. And her daughter, Dorothy, wonders why no movie company has ever done a first-rate picture based on the life of her glamorous mama. Pardon me if I wonder, too.

* * * *

Probably our best-known woman lawyer is the tailored Lucille Pugh, who has specialized for years in divorce and breach cases. Lucille just took one on the chin legally, being fined $250 and ten days in the cooler for being contemptuous to Judge Key Winter, he has ruled. He believed that Miss Pugh indicated in court that he had made a decision through malice; hence the stiff rap. She may take an appeal . . .

* * * *

Did you read Henry Fonda's list of America's six most charming women? I liked his including Margaret Fish, lovely blonde plane hostess, the others being Mrs. Jock "Liz" Whitney, Gertie Lawrence (British), Mrs. Henry Hill Pierce, Helen Hayes (okay, Hank) and the placid Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, once Janet Newbold Ryan. But, Hank—no Mrs. Brokaw-Fonda? Did you get your lumps wnen Mother read the list? . . .

* * * *

Did you know that this scarcely agricultural village has its annual harvest festival? Oh, yes indeedy—it's borrowed from Britain and is held at historic St. Paul's Chapel, way down Broadway in the Wall Street area. A thousand people, mostly Britons, turned out this fall for a procession, prayers, thanksgiving and hymn-singing. Our chief crop, this autumn, was the market slide and its worries. E'en so, it's a beautiful service at old St. Paul's.

* * * *

Another tradition has just gone pooh in the local style picture. No longer, says a mighty Avenue store, should the maid wear black and white exclusively, and the nice lady showed me the very newest and swellest outfit for Emma or Mayme—"antique mahogany" in color, with the usual white trimmings. Goes gorgeously with colorful modern room-decor, said the lady. Even Nursie (or Nana) can be put into something besides white, since some wise men say that babes thrive on pretty colors like yellow or turquoise. Evidently as Mama goes, so goes the help.

Bright Merry-Go-Round Quilt Easy and Interesting to Make

Pattern 5,892.

QUILT making is fascinating—come and join the fun! You'll love this Merry-Go-Round quilt—with strips the same width it's ever so simple to cut—and easy to piece too. You must change about with two materials for the striking effect. Be sure to use a bright print, and "set it off" with a plain material. You'll be piecing the last few blocks before you know it. One ten-inch block with a border makes an attractive pillow. In pattern 5,892 you will find the Block Chart, carefully drawn pattern pieces, a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials, directions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, and a diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Pumpkin Pie With Cream Wins Prize

Whole Pecans Complete Festive Dish Entered in Post Contest.

Similar Treat With Cottage Cheese Lattice Is Second.

By Jean Green.

There were scores of pumpkin and squash pie recipes in the contest. Some were made with cocoanut, others with molasses and ginger, some with honey, and nuts, and others light with beaten egg whites and gelatin. I regret that space does not permit all of them to be published. I hope that you enjoy our first choice. It is an old-fashioned dish that is simple to prepare. More festive is the pumpkin pie with cottage cheese lattice.

The winning recipe was submitted by Mrs. George Jarvis, 1656 Euclid street northwest. She suggests that the spices may be changed to suit the taste of the individual and prefers using the baked pie shell because of time economy. She writes: "I find that a baked pie shell has often proved a saving of time. I have two or three shells waiting for such a filling. "Instead of the pie shell it is possible to bake the filling with the pastry.

Mrs. Jarvis long has been interested in unusual recipes but since she has married it has become her special hobby. Since coming to Washington from Utah, Eastern culinary art has interested her. She has collected many failure proof recipes that she uses time after time. Here is her prize recipe:

Pumpkin Pie.

1 cup of milk
½ cup of sugar
1 teaspoon of cinnamon
¼ teaspoon of allspice
¼ teaspoon of mace
½ teaspoon of salt
2 eggs
2 tablespoons of butter
1 baked pie shell

Heat the pumpkin, milk, sugar, spices and salt in a double boiler. Add the beaten eggs and butter and mix well. Remove from the fire at once and pour the hot filling into a deep-baked pastry shell and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 30 minutes, or until the filling is set.

Plain Pie Pastry.

1½ cups of flour
½ cup of shortening
1-3 teaspoon of salt
Cold water
¾ teaspoon of baking powder

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder together. Cut in the shortening. Add enough cold water to make a stiff dough. Roll and line pie tins. Bake at 425 degrees. This makes two pie shells.

When the pie is baked and cool, place on the serving plates and top with a generous spoonful of sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Garnish with nuts.

The second prize was awarded Mrs. E. G. Geib, 2131 O street northwest. Her recipe solves the problem of soggy crusts by baking the shell in the oven for five minutes before adding the filling. This allows the crust to harden.

PUMPKIN PIE WITH COTTAGE CHEESE LATTICE.

Crust.

1¾ cups of flour
½ teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of baking powder
2-3 cup of butter
3 to 4 tablespoons of milk

Mix and sift the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in the butter. Add milk slowly, tossing mixture together slowly and lightly, using only enough milk to hold ingredients together. This makes two crusts.

Filling.

1½ cups of prepared pumpkin
2-3 cup of brown sugar (packed)
1 teaspoon of cinnamon
1 teaspoon of ginger
1 teaspoon of salt
1 tablespoon of rum
1 tablespoon of molasses
1 tablespoon of grated orange peel
2 eggs
1½ cups of evaporated milk
½ cup of water

Mix the ingredients in order given, turn into pie shell (which has been baked previously for five minutes in a hot oven) and bake in medium oven 350 degrees or until a knife inserted comes out clean. Nut meats (½ cup) make a delicious addition.

Cottage Cheese Lattice.

Garnish pie, when cool, by putting cheese through a fine sieve, blending with 2 tablespoons of top milk, and putting on pie, lattice fashion, with a pastry tube.

The third prize was awarded Mrs. G. C. Warneke, 613 Sheridan street northwest, for this unusual recipe for summer squash. Cymling or patty pans are preferred.

Scalloped Squash and Tomatoes.

3 small summer squash
1 medium-sized onion
½ cup of cooking oil
4 ripe tomatoes
½ cup of chopped celery
1 tablespoon of sugar
1 teaspoon of salt
1 cup of grated cheese

Wash the squash and cut in ½-inch slices. Fry in cooking oil in frying pan until tender. Pour off all of the oil except 2 tablespoons. Add onion thinly sliced and cook until brown.

Put a layer of the prepared squash in a baking dish, cover with tomatoes peeled and cut into slices. Sprinkle with onion, add seasoning, and celery and cover with cheese.

Continue layer for layer until all is used. Put in moderate oven for 25 minutes and cook until cheese is melted. To brown, increase heat during the last five minutes. Serve from baking dish.

Mrs. Edith Nicholson, 1911 Naylor street southeast, won the fourth award. Her recipe for tarts garnished with whipped cream and Brazil nuts make a festive dish for holiday parties.

Brazil Nut Pumpkin Tarts.

1¼ cups of pumpkin
½ cup of sugar
2 tablespoons of brown sugar
½ teasoon of ginger
½ teaspoon of nutmeg
½ teaspoon of salt
½ cup of chopped Brazil nuts
2 eggs, separated
1 cup of heavy cream
¾ cup of milk
Plain pastry

Sliced Brazil nuts for garnishing

Line individual pie pans with thinly rolled circles of pastry. Prepare the filling as follows: Mix the sugar, spices, pumpkin and chopped nuts together. Mix one-half cup of the cream with the milk and the egg yolks, slightly beaten. Stir this into the pumpkin mixture. Beat the egg whites with the salt until stiff but not dry. Fold them into the custard mixture.

Fill the pastry-lined pans with this mixture. Place them on a baking sheet in a hot oven, 450 degrees, 8 to 10 minutes. Then turn down the heat to moderately slow, 325 degrees, and bake 20 minutes more or until the custard is firm. Let the pies stand in the pan a few minutes after removing from the oven. Then lift out into a rack to cool. Garnish with whipped cream and thin slices of Brazil nuts.

The fifth prize is for a pumpkin ice cream that can be made in the tray of the mechanical refrigerator. The recipe is the favorite of Mrs. Joseph Lins, 218 Tennessee avenue northeast.

Pumpkin Ice Cream.

16 marshmallows
2 cups of sifted steamed pumpkin
2-3 cup of brown sugar
1 teaspoon of salt
1½ teaspoons of ginger
1½ teaspoons of cinnamon
2 tablespoons of boiling water
4 tablespoons of orange juice
4 egg yolks
1½ cups of cream

Put the marshmallow on top of a double boiler over hot water. When partly melted, add the pumpkin, brown sugar and salt. Mix the ginger, cinnamon, boiling water and orange juice. Add marshmallows. When marshmallows are nearly melted, remove from the fire and add the egg yolks. Beat well and place in tray of mechanical refrigerator to chill. When mixture is cold and slightly stiffened, fold in the cream beaten until stiff. Freeze until firm.

The Prize-Winning Pumpkin Pie and Its Originator

NOTHING is so fitting as dessert for the November dinner as a pumpkin pie. The one shown below, the prize winner in The Post's recipe contest of last week, is served with whipped cream and whole pecans. It is made from an old-fashioned recipe, and is richly spiced. Mrs. George Jarvis, the maker of the pie, and the recipe prize-winner, is shown at right.

Ironing Unnecessary For Turkish Towels

It takes the magic of soapsuds to bring out the full absorbency of Turkish towels. In fact, Turkish towels become increasingly absorbent with the first four or five washings, it is claimed. Don't ever make the mistake of ironing them however. If you send Turkish towels to the laundry, be sure to specify that you want them rough-dried instead of mangled or the nap will be flattened and much of their absorbency lost until the next washing.

Nut Dish Recipes Asked This Week In Prize Contest

NUTS for the holiday season are a necessity if you would follow century old tradition. For a Thanksgiving party, no menu is complete without them. They are as much associated with the meal as turkey and cranberry sauce. Their association with the harvest festival dates back to the beginning of history when pagan rituals were observed each fall.

Nuts can be used in many holiday dishes. They add a rich flavor to cakes, cookies and puddings. The black walnut, hazel nut, Brazil nut, pecan and almond are old favorites. They can be used as a garnish, or blended before cooking to give added flavor. Candies and nut breads are popular holiday dishes.

The favorite recipe contest this week turns the spotlight on these dishes. For your favorite nut recipe The Post is awarding five cash prizes. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each. Make your selection from the files, write or type it carefully on one side of the paper only, include name and address, and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before November 20.

Home-Made 'Rake.'

A long-handled fork is most convenient to use for "raking" foods from the hot coals of the camp fire. Fasten a long-handled kitchen fork to a yardstick, broom handle or straight, stout stick.

Freshness of berries is determined by appearance, bright color and plumpness. Overripe berries have a dull appearance and probably are moldly underneath.

When buying broilers, allow half a broiler per person to serve six, select three broilers weighing about 1½ pounds a piece.

When making jellies do not forget to use fruits and berries underripe rather than overripe, for better consistency and flavor.

Serve creamed chicken between biscuit halves as the main course for the bridge club luncheon. Add coffee, a salad, a hot bread and some simple dessert such as gingerbread or doughnuts.

Banana filling appeals to most youngsters. Mash a banana. Thin it with a little orange juice and a few drops of lemon juice and spread the mixture over Graham crackers.

Serve a chilled mixture of spiced peaches and seedless grapes, sweetened with maple syrup or strained honey as the first course of a meal.

Stewed dried fruit is ideal to serve for jiffy breakfasts. Cooked the day before, it requires a minimum of time in serving, as there is no peeling, slicing, juicing or can-opening needed.

Prunes may be stuffed with any candied fruits or peels, or with nuts; then dipped in chocolate or rolled in granulated sugar.

Toast Sweetener.

Strained honey mixed with soft butter makes a delicious topping for hot cinnamon toast. It is good, too, on other hot breads. It may be poured from a pitcher for use on pancakes.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WITH FLOWERS AND BOUGHS

WE CAN'T give you any formula for charm in a room . . . it's never achieved in the same way twice. Some of the most dowdy rooms have it, and some of the sleekest, most expensive rooms haven't. We know a woman who does her interior decorating almost entirely with flowers and boughs, and she works wonders with autumn roses in a blue bowl or a tall vase of goldenrod. She's aware of the fact that there's always a special at the florists when her garden isn't producing, so her decorating isn't as expensive as it sounds.

Another friend of our brings out a mellowed slightly shabby room with a collection of interesting brasses kept gleaming all the time. Others depend on beautifully patterned fabrics or on finely detailed furniture.

And ever so many of us rely mostly on color. For instance, here's a lady with a lovely living room that has canary yellow walls, a plum carpet, draperies with a pale blue pattern through them, a plum sofa, a pale blue damask wing chair and a beige lounge chair . . . there is a white fur rug in front of the fireplace and an extra chair in dull old rose. Her bedroom is attractive, too. It has gray-blue painted furniture, gray-blue carpeting, apricot draperies, a brown satin boudoir chair, flowered wallpaper.

Incidentally, speaking of color, have you a copy of our bulletin, "Recipes for New Wall Colors," which gives ingredients required for achieving the subtle decorator tones that are fashionable now? It will be sent on receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Copyright 1937, for The Washington Post.

For Inexpensive Meals.

Budget-pleasing main dishes include: Deep dish tuna pie, vegetable and hard-cooked egg pot pie, noodles and ham baked together, baked lima beans with fresh pork, kidney beans and celery, spaghetti and cheese, veal stew, lamb pot pie with vegetables, scrambled eggs and minced ham.

Use Shorter Cords.

Wall outlets for electrical devices used in the kitchen, pantry or butler's pantry should be placed at table height. This permits the use of shorter cords with cooking utensils, eliminating coils that are likely to get in the housewife's way.

Milk Makes Food Twice As Nutritious

Food Value Is Retained Even After Cooking, Expert Says.

By Nancy Ellis.

TO MAKE foods doubly nutritious, cook with milk. This sound advice has solved the eating problems of many children with fussy appetites.

The milk includes the calcium, phosphorus and protein necessary for building strong bones and muscles, and when there is a question as to whether or not the diet is well balanced an abundance of milk will safeguard health and provide certain of the necessary food elements.

The cleanest and best milk should be purchased for children. Pasteurized milk, of course, is always good and in order to keep it successfully place it in the refrigerator.

Keeps Value Cooked.

Ice creams, chocolate milk shakes, cream soups, cocoa, milk puddings and cream sauces are a few of the popular ways in which to incorporate milk in the dietary. The food value of the milk is unchanged, so even if cooked it serves the body equally well.

Milk can be used instead of water in cooking rice and cereal. In this way it imparts added calories and mineral values to these cereals. Creamed soups which combine vegetables and milk are well liked by children of all ages.

This week being national milk week, it behooves every mother to pay special attention to good food habits and make doubly sure that meals contain a sufficient quantity of this wholesome food.

The following recipes are made with milk and are designed for the hot school lunch:

Scalloped Seafood.

4 tablespoons of butter
6 tablespoons of flour
2 cups of milk
1/3 cup of cream
1 teaspoon of salt
¼ teaspoon of paprika
2 cups of corn
2 cups of small oysters
1 tablespoon of minced parsley

Add the flour to the melted butter. Mix well. Add hot milk and cream. Cook slowly until thickened. Add seasonings. Add the corn and oysters. Pour into a buttered casserole and cover with crumbs mixed with melted butter. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Scalloped Potatoes and Ham.

6 medium-sized potatoes
1 medium onion
2 tablespoons of flour
1 cup of chopped cooked ham
2 cups of milk
1 tablespoon of butter
Salt

Pare the potatoes and cut in thin slices crosswise. Place half of the potatoes in the bottom of a buttered baking dish and sprinkle with salt, pepper, and half of the onion, flour and chopped ham. Add the rest of the potatoes and repeat until all ingredients are used. Add milk, butter, and sprinkle top with paprika. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 1 hour. Remove the cover during the last 15 minutes.

Nut Bread.

2½ cups of flour
2 cups of graham flour
2 teaspoons of salt
½ cup of sugar
3 teaspoons of baking powder
½ cup of molasses
2 cups of milk
2 tablespoons of melted butter
1 cup of chopped raisins
1 cup of chopped nuts

Sift the flours. Resift with the salt, sugar, and baking powder. Add the flakes of bran left in the sifter. Add molasses and milk. Beat well. Add melted butter, nuts, and raisins. Turn into two well greased loaf pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until the bread shrinks from the sides of the pans. This will be about 1 hour.

Washing Shower Curtains.

The white, sticky film often found on rubberized shower curtains is caused by steam and water. To remove it, wash the curtain in warm water and mild soap, rub with a soft brush and then rinse thoroughly in clean warm water.

Scalloped Seafood Made With Milk

Crystal Plates Lovely on Mats Of Silver Thread

Color Becomes Important; Runners Now Replace Tablecloths.

If you would be smart this fall, use crystal for table appointments. This is being shown in ever-increasing amounts. Exquisite plates with center monograms, square service plates, bread and butters and even crystal bread and butter spreaders were noticed in one Connecticut avenue shop. These are to rest on silver thread mats or mirror plaques for sophisticated formal parties.

Table cloths are definitely taking a second place to the new mats. One of the newest schemes is to use two long runners, one at either side of the table instead of the individual place mats. These are flattering to your table and easy to serve from. For very informal parties, cellophane runners are good. For the more formal occasions, choose linen with silver threads. These launder nicely and come in patterns such as the fleur-de-lis.

Color is playing an important place in the new fall table appointments. Pottery in combination, such as dusty rose with gray or gray with black, is especially smart. Aquamarine is good. Even Wedgewood reflects the new trend and features a new pastel green in a complete set. Wedgewood after-dinner coffee cups are in black.

Linens are gay. Place mats of chartruese linen are banded with silver threads for luxurious service. For informal service there are hand-blocked linens. One charmisg set is of organdy with a tropical fish marine motif. Both gray and white linens are smart. Gay place mats and good morning napkins for the breakfast tray are a thought to keep in mind when purchasing gifts.

A new use is being made of walnut and sycamore wood. These are rounded and polished into salad service plates. The two woods are used in combination with chromium for one large salad bowl. The serving fork and spoon are of matching design. Another smart salad service is the green pottery salad bowl with vine-leaved plates on the wide walnut serving tray.

New Types of Collars Eliminate Collar Pins

New York, (AP).—That old collar-and-collar-pin problem is rapidly being solved by a variety of developments.

Daytime wear of stiff collars, which eliminate the pin, is becoming quite a vogue. At the other extreme, button-down collars, which also eliminate the pin, are getting a big play.

Then the "pinless" pin has just about been perfected, the latest being one with inconspicuous crossed spring clamp arms with tiny teeth at the end which grip but don't tear. Finally, they're making shirts with holes already bored through the collar flaps, like buttonholes, so you can wear a regular pin with impunity.

Scalding Water Makes Milk Containers Pure

You can't be too lavish with the soap and scalding water in caring for all containers in which milk is kept or served, because milk unfortunately is just as beneficial to bacteria as it is to babies. That's why pitchers, mugs, or bottles to which the milk is transferred need to be sterile. If there's even a little scum or stale milk left in them the fresh milk may be contaminated.

One of the easiest ways to get milk containers clean is to let cold water stand in them for a few minutes before the regular washing in hot soapy water. This prevents the formation of the curd, which is hard to remove without using a brush or a pad of steel wool.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Psychological Treatment.

A very sensible review of the present state of our knowledge of high blood pressure is made by one of the distinguished Philadelphia physicians. He is more cheerful than I imagine he would have been 30 years ago, before he acquired so much experience. He says, for instance, about extreme high blood pressures of 200 or over, that he has been following a considerable number of these for many years. One of them, a member of his own family, who had for over 30 years a pressure of from 200 to 275, was nearly 100 years old at death.

Under treatment he makes the somewhat surprising but very sensible statement that the treatment of high blood pressure is psychologic. It must be addressed to the intelligence rather than to the stomach of the patient. Patients with high blood pressure must be assured, he says, of the comparative harmlessness of the condition.

At one time it was customary in high blood pressure to give a salt-free, low-protein diet. All this did was to make the patient's life miserable. Vilhjalmur Stefansson has shown that one can subsist on an exclusive meat diet for a year without any elevation of blood pressure.

Physicians are generally agreed that quantity is more important than quality in food, especially if the patient is overweight, as is so commonly the case. Moderation is the most important thing to teach the patient with high blood pressure. Moderation in the use of tobacco should always be advised, and if the patient has any heart pain, tobacco should be stopped altogether. The bowels need attention, and it may be necessary to use mineral oil or in constipated people a weekly dose of castor oil.

Cucumber and Tomato Sandwich Talk of the Tea at Spanish Embassy; Special Turkey Dressing Feature of Mrs. McGoodwin's Luncheon.

LEONARDO SANCHEZ, butler at the Spanish Embassy, has given a new slant on tea time refreshments. At the party given last week for a select group by Senora de Los Rios, wife of the Ambassador, a special cucumber and tomato sandwich that proved to be the talk of the party was served.

Here is the recipe as given by Senor Sanchez. Slender cucumbers were peeled, sliced, salted and wrapped in a towel for three hours. Whole green peppers were toasted in the oven, then fried, strained, and mixed with mayonnaise to form the sauce. The sandwiches were made by placing slices of cucumber and tomato with sauce between rounds of bread. Appetizing? Well, just about everyone who has sampled them declares, "There's nothing quite so delicious."

The menu particularly interesting for an afternoon tea follows:

Menu.

Caviar canapes
Hors d'oeuvres of Chorico and shrimp
Celery stuffed with cheeses
Assorted tea sandwiches
Spanish pastry
Cocktails
Sweet and dry sherry
Tea Coffee

Description: Caviar canapes concealed slices of giant olives, hors d'oeuvres were served on whole grapefruit with centers filled with sauce for "dunking." For the choricos or Spanish sausage, a center of tomato sauce, for shrimp, a mayonnaise. Sandwiches of assorted shapes and fillings. One blended cheese with spices, Spanish style. Pastry made by the chef at the Embassy—light flaky with cream filling and baked in layers. Cocktails of gin, vermouth, grenadine and lemon juice. From an epicure's standpoint, a tea of outstanding merit.

AT THE LUNCHEON given Tuesday in honor of Mrs. George Messersmith, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, everyone commented about the delicious turkey dressing made from a special recipe of Herr Fred Meissner, chef de cuisine at the Hay-Adams House. Hostess Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, wife of the former United States Minister to Venezuela, said it suited the widely variant tastes of her guests, among whom were Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, and many wives of Latin-American diplomats.

The recipe is particularly timely now that Thanksgiving and Christmas are practically in our midst:

TURKEY STUFFED WITH CHEF'S SPECIAL DRESSING.

Stuff the turkey with chef's special dressing. Put thin-sliced pork fat over breast of turkey and tie together. Place in pan with an onion, carrot, a little thyme, bay leaf, and fresh butter. Salt, put in oven and baste with Madeira. When turkey is done, remove from pan, let gravy set for a few minutes, take off the fat, add a little stock, reduce gravy one-half, add a dash of Maggi and strain.

CHEF'S SPECIAL APPLE DRESSING.

Peel half a dozen apples, cut in pieces, put in pan with 3 ounces of butter, and simmer for ten minutes. Chop very fine one onion, turkey liver. Add fresh bread crumbs, salt, pepper, parsley, small pieces of celery, a little powdered thyme and mix with the apples.

Padded Dishpan Preserves China

Delicate china and glassware might last long enough to serve as family heirlooms if they didn't so often come to grief through dishpan accidents. Careful handling and intelligent use of equipment are the remedies for needless breakage.

To provide a soft resting place for some treasured article that may slip from your hands while you're washing fine dishes, pad the bottom of the dishpan or sink with a folded Turkish towel. Handle the pieces gently, placing only one or two into the dishpan at one time. A rubber device slipped over the end of the faucet will lessen the chances of nicking.

Abrupt temperature changes are one of the chief causes of casualties to delicate pieces of china and glass. Before immersing the pieces in the water, be sure the suds are comfortable to your hands. Rinse with water of the same temperature.

Indian Recipes Prominent In Mrs. Lawson's Cuisine

Con-a-haney and Ka-wisita Dishes She Will Serve at Thanksgiving.

National Club Leader's Grandmother Was a Delaware.

By Jean Green.

IF YOU have never tasted Con-a-haney then you are not a connoisseur of American cooking. At least, that is the opinion of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, whose hobby is collecting Indian recipes.

"Con-a-haney is one of the original Indian recipes prepared by the Cherokee and Delaware Indians," she says. "It dates back to pre-pioneer days when only native foods were available to the Indians."

Tribes Developed Art.

"Washingtonians not familiar with Indian customs are amazed to discover that even before the discovery of America many tribes had developed a distinct culinary art," she explains. "They had at their disposal eggs, meat, fowl, vegetables, cereals, wild fruits and oils. Tasteful combinations were prepared with primitive cooking facilities."

Some of the more famous Indian dishes are corn dodgers, crackling bread, bean bread, wild rice, barbecued squirrel, canuichee (a thick vegetable soup made from hickory nuts, hominy and sweet potatoes, and ka-wisita, made from parched corn.

Born Among Indians.

Mrs. Lawson, who was born in Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, is very proud of her ancestry. Her grandmother was a Delaware, and it was from this grandmother that she acquired her love of good food and perfect seasoning.

"Some of my first memories are of my grandmother preparing hominy, parched corn and dried meat," she said. "It was fascinating to me and I used to visit her at every occasion."

This recipe for con-a-haney is one that Mrs. Lawson learned to prepare many years ago. It is now served at her Washington parties with roast turkey or sliced ham. It is served as a second vegetable from the casserole.

Con-a-haney.

2 quarts of corn.
½ cup of nut meats well broken.
1 tablespoon of butter.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Enough hominy water to moisten.

Mix the ingredients together and cook in a slow oven for half an hour.

Mrs. Lawson has several dishes that she enjoys preparing. For the holiday season she takes time in her busy days to prepare a steamed pudding rich with real plums. This year it will be served at her Thanksgiving parties. It can be made several days in advance and then re-warmed just before serving.

Plum Pudding With Plums.

1 pound of currants.
¾ pound of chopped suet.
Citron.
3 candied orange peels.
3 candied lemon peels.
1 small bottle of red cherries cut in half (do not use the juice).
1 loaf of bread, crumbed.
9 eggs.
2 tablespoons of sugar.
1 teaspoon of salt (small).
1 dash of cloves.
½ nutmeg.
8 greengage plums free from juice (pull fruit apart and remove seeds).
½ teaspoon of baking powder.

Steam in molds. A ½-pound can mold should steam three hours. A 1-pound can mold should steam four hours. Re-warm ½ hour before serving. Leave in cans.

A recipe for venison stew was used by Mrs. Lawson's grandmother in Indian Territory when venison was plentiful. It was prepared in great earthen pots kept at the right temperature by means of hot stones dropped in at exactly right intervals. Fragrance of this stew and its rich savory taste made it very popular. Corn and beans could be added for variety.

Venison Stew.

Cut meat into small squares, roll in seasoned flour, salt and pepper (a wee bit of red pepper).

Have on the stove a kettle or saucepan with boiling hot water. Drop the meat in, a few pieces at a time. Do not stir until all pieces have been in long enough to "coat over." Stew for two hours. Be guided in amount of water used by quantity of meat, which should be completely covered in the beginning.

MRS. ROBERTA CAMPBELL LAWSON.

Improve Your Pronunciation

YOUR PRONUNCIATION—Is it a credit to you? Can you read a menu with ease, refer to names and events in the news, confident that every syllable is correct?

Or do you sometimes catch that half-smile on a friend's face that says you've blundered?

That's a warning to check your speech at once, to pounce quickly on errors that give a bad impression.

Perhaps, when you dine with a new beau, you order "hor-DOOVZ." Hors d'oeuvres you pronounce orDERvr. Do you ask for the TAble de hote? Prefer FILlet MINyun? Lettuce with ROCKfurt dressing? TAH-bl-dote is correct for table d'hote, FEEay MEENyon for Filet Mignon, RokeFORR or ROKEfert for Roquefort.

Even worse are boners in plain English, such as scrambling CHOCKolit pie into CHAWKlut pie—SIRup into SURup—licorice into LICKerish. LICKoris is correct.

Away with such blunders. Groom your speech so your friends will be proud of you instead of apologetic about you.

Pick up your newspaper. Read aloud. Do you say RiVEERA, AMURRikan, STALin, the FasSISti? Repeat correctly: ReeveeAYrah for Riviera, AMERican, STAHleen, FahSHEEstee for Fascisti.

Do you say a movie adverTISEment announces your fayveRITE star as the hehr-o-EEN? AdVERtisement, FAYverit, HEHR-oin are correct.

Our 40-page booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," makes it simple to check your errors, helps you to cultivate quickly that clear, charming speech that rates with educated people.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Frozen Vegetables Make Appearance

Freezing is the newest method of food preservation and is bringing to the housewife fresh corn on the cob at Christmas and strawberry shortcake for Thanksgiving. A very quick method of freezing is used. Thus the color and fresh flavor of foods are retained.

A complete line of vegetables is available in 10 and 16-ounce packages. These serve four persons. Also meats, fish, poultry and fruits are packaged for small families. Among the fish available are lobster, salmon steaks, swordfish and mackerel. Fresh apricots, blueberries, peaches and strawberries are some of the fruits marketed. Fryers and broilers are sold and turkeys can be obtained on order.

Careless Drying Blamed For Red, Chapped Hands

When hands become red and chapped in cold weather, it's usually careless drying rather than washing that's to blame. Always use a cleean dry towel, because a damp one will not absorb the moisture completely. A hand lotion rubbed in after washing helps to keep the skin soft and smooth, but it does not take the place of the frequent soap and water scrubbing that hands require as a measure of good grooming and good health.

Pleasant Homes

We are all absorbed with refurbishing along about this time of the year, and new cover on old furniture is one of the most effective ways to revive a jaded room. Elizabeth MacRae Boykin's article tomorrow on modes and manners of new upholstery for fall decoration is full of suggestions that you will find useful and adaptable to your home, whether it is very grand or very simple. Miss Boykin's articles appear regularly in this paper.

Cider and Cinnamon Make a Perfect Ice

Cinnamon Cider Ice.

Boil ⅛ cup red cinnamon candies and ⅛ cup sugar with 1 cup water for 5 minutes. Cool and add ¼ cup lemon juice and 3 cups cider. Pour mixture into freezing container of modern ice cream freezer. (To allow for expansion fill not more than two-thirds full.) Assemble and cover. Then pack mixture of crushed ice and rock salt (3 parts ice to 1 of salt by volume) around the freezing container. Turn crank slowly but steadily. When mixture becomes too stiff to turn, remove cover carefully, take out dasher and pack evenly with spoon. Cover with wax paper and replace lid. Draw off excess water and then repack with ice and salt, using same proportion as for freezing. Cover freezer and allow cider ice to harden at least 1 hour before serving.

Cleans Coffee Pot.

Coffee pots need scrubbing, airing and sterilizing every week. If you have difficulty in making clear, well-flavored coffee the pot may be at fault.

Baths More Important When Cold Days Begin

Don't let down on your bath schedule in cold weather. When the thermometer begins to drop, a daily scrubbing with plenty of soap is even more important than in summer when nature sees to it that the pores are kept open through excessive perspiration.

A bath that begins with warm soapy water and winds up with a clean cold splash improves the circulation and helps to build up a protection against easy cold catching. By making the skin more efficient as an automatic regulator, it helps to guard the body against sudden changes in temperature.

Miss Perkins Asks Boss-Worker Pacts

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP).—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told New York State manufacturers yesterday that sound relations between employer and employe would improve stabilization and increase production in industry.

Speaking at the banquet of the Associated Industries of New York, Miss Perkins said, "It is highly desirable that sound and practicable relations be established between business and organized labor in the interest of improving stabilization and increased production."

"These relations," she added, "must be constructive, fair and honorable and must be lived up to by both sides."

She said "much promise" has been shown toward stabilization of production and employment "which should go far toward reducing the unnecessarily high levels of seasonal unemployment."

Judge Rounds Up Air Conditioners, Lectures on Noise

An impromptu one-man "anti-noise" campaign was launched in District Court yesterday when Justice James M. Proctor, disturbed by the noises of workmen who are installing an air-conditioning apparatus, sent deputy marshals scurrying about the building to seize every workman.

The whole of them, some 20 in all, were herded into Justice Proctor's court, where they heard one of the foremen receive a smiling lecture on the evils of disturbing the District Court. The jurist pointed out that the contract called for the contractors to avoid noise after the court resumed its fall sessions.

When every one disclaimed being responsible for making the noises, Justice Proctor said he would summon the head foreman for a warning.

WOL Workers Win Raises by Strike

The strike of operators at radio station WOL was settled last night, when the management and the American Communications Association, C. I. O. affiliate reached an agreement on pay raises and a 40-hour week.

Under the contract, which is for a year, apprentices in their first six months will receive $25 per week, and for the second six months, $27.50.

Regular technicians in their first six months will get $30.50 a week, and from the first year to year and a half $35. For each six months of service thereafter the technicians will get raises of $1.50 a week until the maximum of $55 is attained.

The contract agreement was obtained after day-long negotiations, during which the station remained on the air, under the terms of a "truce" after a "sit-down" strike on Thursday morning.

Monster Airplane Ordered of Martin

Baltimore, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Glenn L. Martin Company announced yesterday work would start soon on an ocean transport plane which would have 188 feet of wingspread greatest of any airplane ever built in this country and about the height of a 14 story building.

The plane will carry 100 passengers by day or 66 at night.

Woman Senator Quits To Become Court Clerk

Bel Air, Md., Nov. 12 (AP).—Miss Mary E. W. Risteau, Maryland's first woman senator, w l resign her seat to become clerk of the Harford County Circuit Court.

She said she did not intend to give up politics—her appointment will last a year—but that the court post pays $3,000 a year and the Senate only $450 every two years.

HARLAN MILLER Over the Coffee

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

Washington appears to be taking the rhinestone-studded culture-championship belt away from Boston, partly because there's more money in the Capital, and nothing snuggles up to culture the way money does.

* * * *

Already there's a concert, lecture, debate, forum or other seance, esthetic or intellectual, scheduled for every evening this winter, and quite a lot of earnest Washingtonians are afraid they won't have time for a movie this side of Lent.

There was a sit-down strike of newspapermen at the regular press conference of one of the Cabinet members the other day.

A little weary of the Cabinet member's steady heckling of the journalists, for real and fancied reportorial sins, they filed into his office, sat down in a semi-circle facing him, and just sat there—without asking a single question.

The sit-down strike lasted seven minutes, when the Secretary scented something was afoot, and then the newsmen filed out . . . This conference usually lasts 30 or 45 minutes . . . No hard feelings, though.

* * * *

This is going to be tough on the Congressmen, some of whom regard Washington as a place to grab a little culture . . . They're trying to adjust their schedules to leave time to fill the stockings Christmas Eve, and leave a few evenings to absorb a few beers.

"——they hide culture from her."

I know one tremulous lady who has already dished out the shekels for 21 lectures at Town Hall, five soirees of the Washington Forum, 19 lectures by the austere and sedate National Geographic Society, and a series of 20 concerts by the National Symphony and a series of six by the Philadelphia Orchestra.

* * * *

That totals 71 tussles with nobler things, not to mention a play or two a week and maybe a few wrestling matches, hockey games and receptions at the Turkish Embassy.

* * * *

She is undaunted by the fact that she hasn't ever heard of most of the lecturers . . . This, in fact, actually titillates her curiosity, because she has always suspected that people kept hiding little bits of culture from her, the way her father used to hide his whisky bottle from her mother.

* * * *

Before the dogwood blooms again she's going to know the difference between a nocturne and a sonata, between a liberal and a radical, between Mombasa and Zamboanga, or jolly well know the reason why.

* * * *

At least she's going to discover that Sinclair Lewis, Thomas Mann and Aldous Huxley are a bit of a let-down, in the flesh; that it didn't seem possible all those stories could be true about roly-poly little Herbert George Wells, and that Cecil de Mille seems oh, infinitely more intellectual than Walter Lippman.

Between these 71 cerebral occasions, the Army and Marine band concerts, an occasional trip to the Senate galleries and a peek at the Congressional Record or the editorial pages, you'd think a girl could keep out of mischief.

* * * *

But no; she'll have to be trotting off to see some of those 25 or 30 art exhibitions at the 6 or 8 art galleries, trying to figure out what sort of smoked glasses the artists were wearing when they painted that one.

* * * *

And at just this moment comes a messenger with news from the Film Society that it will devote 10 evenings to showing the film classics—early Bill Harts, Mary Pickfords, Theda Baras and the Birth of a Nation, and the like—to connoisseurs of movie antiquities. Which will pretty well make it impossible for us to see the current movies until they, too, have become antiquities.

* * * *

All this is a bit of a reflection on the 25 or 30 columnists who tell you everything about everything, every day in the Washington daily papers—some people even try to read all the columnists every day, for fear they'll miss something . . .

And, to be perfectly sensible about all this culture, isn't it a lot easier to stay in bed all day and read the columnists? After all, culture, begins and ends in bed.

District Surveyor Renamed

Edward A. Dent, who succeeded Melvin C. Hazen as District surveyor, yesterday was reappointed by Hazen and the other Commissioners for four years.

25% of Goal Is Attained in Chest Drive

Gifts Number 35,946, Totaling $519,061, Units Report.

Metropolitan Division Leads With 28.05% Subscribed.

Community Chest volunteer workers yesterday passed the quarter mark in their drive for $2,059,000 before November 23.

Leaders of five campaign units, meeting at the Willard Hotel yesterday reported contributions from 26,212 donors in the District and its suburbs.

The Metropolitan Unit, reporting 28.05 per cent of its quota in hand, nosed out the Special Assignments Unit, which took an early lead at the opening report meeting Wednesday. The latter group has now raised 25.21 per cent of the campaign goal set for it.

In third place was the Government Unit, to which had been assigned the largest quota given any of the campaign groups. It has in hand 25.82 per cent of its quota.

Publishers Attend.

Occupying the head table at yesterday's meeting were the publishers of Washington's five newspapers—Frank B. Noyes, of the Evening Star; Lowell Mellett, of the Washington Daily News; Eugene Myer, of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, of the Washington Herald and the Washington Times.

Others at this table were Frederick M. Bradley, reporting for the Special Assignments Unit; Dr. Homer K. Butler, reporting for the Metropolitan Unit; Frederick P. H. Siddons, reporting for the Group Solicitation Unit; T. Stanley Holland, vice chairman of the Suburban Unit, and Frank Birgfeld, vice chairman of the Governmental Unit.

The Publicity Unit was in charge of the gathering, with Earl H. Nash as presiding officer. He was assisted by Joseph D. Kaufman, chairman of the unit, who had charge of the microphones for both the public address system and the National Broadcasting Co. Songs were led by Harry Somerville, manager of the Willard.

In reporting for the Special Assignments Unit, Bradley announced receipt of 80 gifts, totaling $50,885, bringing the total to date to 107 contributions, amounting to $161,835. Siddons, for his Group Solicitation Unit, reported 5,180 contributions, totaling $51,619.65, and a total to date of 6,967 gifts for a total of $93,856.04.

Dr. Butler Reports.

Reporting for his Metropolitan unit, Dr. Butler announced 1,929 gifts, totaling $37,768.94, bringing the total for his group to 3,002 gifts, $57,286.54. For the Government unit, Birgfeld reported 18,569 contributions for $134,733.20, bringing the total of his unit to 25,250 contributions and $200,108.91. Holland announced 325 gifts for $4,208.43, bringing the total to date to 477 gifts and $5,078.34. The Capital unit reported 129 gifts amounting to $897.35.

A large number of increases and 100 per cent firms were reported by the Group Solicitation unit.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Myers, of the Civic Education Association, gave $500, an increase of 66 2-3 per cent over last year. Organizations reporting 100 per cent contributions included:

Washington Heart Association, Episcopal Home for Children, Florence Crittenton Home, Newspaper Information Service, the American Legion Welfare Department, the Council of Social Agencies, the Earle Building, the East Washington Savings Bank, Family Service Association, Jewish Community Center, Social Service Exchange, Social Hygiene Society, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society and the Washington Board of Trade.

Among the gifts of $100 and more for the Community Chest, reported yesterday, were as follows: $10,000, Washington Gas Light Co.; $3,000, E. S. Kaufman; $2,500, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis; $2,000, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Burling and Mrs. Daniel G. ### Luray's Dedicatory Program

Luray, Va., Nov. 12.—Following a series of trial recitals during the past three weeks, the Belle Brown Northcott Memorial Tower and Carillon tomorrow will be formally dedicated and presented to the Town of Luray. The program, which will start at 1 p. m., follows:

Presentation of the tower, carillon and surrounding park by Mrs. Katherine Northcott Graves and Col. T. C. Northcott, donor of the $200,000 memorial.

Dedicatory prayer by Dr. T. Ryland Sanford.

Parran Urges Funds for War On Pneumonia

Public funds must be appropriated and expended in greater measure to help bridge the economic gap separating indigent and low-incomed pneumonia sufferers from proper nursing care and serum treatment, Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, said yesterday.

His statement came at the opening of a conference of nine medical experts assembled by him to formulate ways and means of attacking a disease which takes more than 100,000 lives in this country every year.

Yesterday's session was devoted to informal discussions on incidence and mortality rates, standardization of pneumonia sera, typing facilities in the various States and other aspects of the general problem.

A sub-committee was named by Dr. Parran to draft recommendations for a program which, as finally adopted, is expected to be conducted on a Nation-wide scale. This preliminary report probably will be submitted to the group of experts in two or three weeks.

Dr. Lloyd D. Felton, professor of pathology and bacteriology at Johns Hopkins University, said the main hope for reducing pneumonia's high death toll lies in the greater availability and use of sera. The more common types of the disease—there are more than 30 altogether—yield to serum treatment if it is begun soon enough.

He emphasized that the immunizing agent against pneumonia which he has developed is still in an experimental stage, notwithstanding the fact that it has been used with apparent success among thousands of CCC enrollees in the last five years and soon will be introduced in the United States Army.

Dr. Ernest E. Irons, dean of Rush Medical College, urged that doctors and public alike recognize pneumonia as an emergency disease, just as they do acute appendicitis, and be alert to the value of prompt typing and, if it is indicated, administration of the serum called for.

Dr. David P. Barr, of Washington University School of Medicine, declared that the family doctor is capable of diagnosing and treating pneumonia, but he must be provided with the right "tools," such as laboratory facilities, in greater measure than is the case today.

The other conferees were Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Dr. Russell L. Cecil, Cornell Medical School; Dr. Alfred Friedlander, dean, University of Cincinnati Medical School; Dr. Roderick Heffron, staff member of the Commonwealth Fund; Dr. Roger I. Lee, Massachusetts Public Health Council, and Dr. George H. Ramsey, New York State Health Department.

Will Use Medical-Dental Service Bureau Against Group Health, Inc.

Payment of Fees May Be Budgeted Over 8-Month Period.

A united effort by Washington physicians to use their Medical-Dental Service Bureau as a competitive weapon against the Group Health Association, Inc., began to get under way yesterday pending possible legal action against the latter agency.

Horace Russell, general counsel of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, is expected to submit to Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal a statement disclosing the status of the Group Health Association, Inc. Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, asked Seal to conduct an investigation.

Dr. Wallace M. Yater, an officer in the District Medical Society, and who helped to found the service bureau more than two years ago, last night admitted that not enough doctors are using its facilities. Under the system, payment of fees may be budgeted over eight months or longer.

Campaign Considered.

"We hope to put on a campaign and make it practically obligatory for physicians to use the service in those cases where it would help," said Dr. Yater. "In this direction, we believe, lies the solution of the problem of adequate medical care for the middle class."

Editor of the medical society's "Annals" and a member of its executive committee, Dr. Yates pointed out that the local profession is paying for upkeep of the Medical-Dental Service Bureau, at the same time furnishing immeasurable aid to the community by treating the indigent free in hospitals.

Decision of the District Medical Society Thursday night to continue its campaign against operation of the HOLC-sponsored Group Health Association was criticized yesterday by Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America.

Agencies Defend G. H. A.

Baker informed Dr. Thomas E. Neill, society president, that he hopes reports that the organization intends to use "obstructive, destructive, coercive . . . tactics against the G. H. A. are untrue."

"If it is true," he continued, "I would like to urge that it be reconsidered because Federal workers, organized or unorganized, have a very strong interest in improved medical service, and improved relationship with doctors, which it seems can best be obtained through organizations such as the G. H. A. and other projected groups."

Baker's statement followed the adoption of resolutions by three U. F. W. locals—Treasury, Veterans' Administration and Social Security Board—defending the G. H. A. which offers medical service to HOLC employes and their families at a flat monthly rate.

Holbrook to Head Third Corps Area

Maj. Gen. Lucius R. Holbrook will assume command of the Third Corps Area, with headquarters in Baltimore, next February, Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring announced yesterday. Gen. Holbrook will succeed Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, who has been transferred to command of the Ninth Corps Area, San Francisco.

In his present post of commander of the Philippine Department, Gen. Holbrook will be followed by Maj. Gen. John H. Hughes, now in command of the Philippine Division, at Fort William McKinley, P. I. Brig. Gen. Percy P. Bishop, commander of the Harbor Defense of Manila and Subic Bays, will become commanding officer of the Philippine Division, War Department officials said.

The changes have become necessary, it was said, because of the coming retirement in March of Maj. Gen. George H. Simonds, who is now in charge of the Ninth Corps Area.

Sent to Arrest 1, Officer Returns 4 In 2 Auto Cases

Because he has one of those photographic memories, Detective John O. Curtis of the auto squad came back with four prisoners instead of one.

Curtis had been sent to Alexandria to pick up Meyer M. Johnson, colored, 30, 1137 Seventeenth street, who was charged with the theft of an automobile belonging to Gertrude Bulong, 1726 M street northwest.

Driving back across Highway Bridge with Johnson handcuffed to his arm, Curtis noticed an automobile containing three white men coming toward him. He recognized it as a stolen car. So Curtis turned about and overtook the other machine at an Alexandria traffic light.

Then Curtis handcuffed Johnson to himself again, put the three new prisoners in the rear seat and returned to Washington.

The three white men, all of whom were charged with unauthorized use of an automobile, were William C. Driscoll, 27, of 1365 Columbia road; A. W. Lomey, 25, of 3361 Military road northwest, and J. E. McMurray, 21, of the Military road address.

Open House at Vocational School Reveals Answer to Job Problem

W. F. Smith, principal, and Dr. C. W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of junior high and vocational schools (right), watch Edgar Mingus, of 515 Fifth street, at work in the print shop of Abbott Vocational School during "open house" last night.

Students at Abbott Vocational School, Seventh and O streets northwest, guided throngs of parents brothers and sisters through the class rooms and workshops of the institution at an "open house" held last night to mark National Education Week.

Boys ranging in age from 14 to 20 repaired automobiles, planed window frames, wound armatures and showed their technical skill in various ways as the visitors looked on. Teachers were on hand in every shop to explain processes to interested guests, including Dr. C. W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of District junior high and vocational schools. Dr. Holmes was escorted through the extensive building by W. F. Smith, principal.

"We are looking forward to a year of considerable expansion," Smith said last night. "We expect that the George-Deen act, passed at the last session of Congress will materially aid us, as it provides for appropriation of $2 of Federal money for every dollar given us by the school board. We hope to add at least one new course—in paperhanging—this year."

Founded 12 years ago, the Abbott School gives vocational training to nearly 350 students in a three-year course. "Our graduates face no unemployment," Smith declared. In many of the trades taught at the school, there is an actual shortage of workers, he added. Alluding to the school's print shop, he pointed to a poster proclaiming lack of trained printers.

Other occupations covered in the Abbott curriculum include electrical motor work and electrical wiring, house painting and decoration, sheet metal work, plumbing, automobile mechanics and woodworking.

Many of the products turned out by the boys are used in the school building itself. In the woodworking shop, for instance, a table for a science classroom was taking shape not far from a 17-foot boat being constructed for Smith with materials which he had provided. In the automobile shop enthusiastic young workers were delving into the mysteries of cars brought to them for repair. "The wark is done at a very low price," explained W. L. Drissel, the instructor, "but it takes a great deal longer."

School activities are not confined to manual instruction. "There is a real school lif ," said Mrs. Mary Rish, commercial teacher. "We have a dancing cla , physical education, and courses in English, civics, trade science and mathematics, mechanical drawing and bookkeeping and typing. Only about half the students' day is spent in the shop."

Good use is made of vacations, too. During the Christmas rush, Mrs. Rish said, some of her students obtain employment at large in department stores. And in the summer, the teachers themselves frequently go back to their trades, not only to learn the latest methods, but also to maintain contacts for employment opportunities for their students.

The boys seem to like it. One young guide, who came to Abbott from a District high school, declared, "I've been here only six weeks—and I think it's swell."

$140 Obtained By Bandits in Five Holdups

Shot Fired at Owner of Liquor Store; Girl's $200 Brooch Taken.

Four men and two boys in their teens yesterday collected $140 in five holdups, during one of which a shot was fired at Samuel Solomon, 45, proprietor of a liquor store at Third and M streets northwest.

Solomon told police he was in his store last night with his wife and a customer when two colored men entered, asked for a half-pint of whisky and tendered $1. When he opened the cash register, Solomon said, one of the colored men pointed a pistol on him and demanded money.

He gave them $40, he said, when the bandit with the gun, pulled the trigger. The bandits then made the customer and himself lie on the floor, Solomon said.

The same pair struck again, police reported, when they held up Richard Hall, 1214 I street northwest, manager of a Thom McAn shoe store at 1124 Seventh street northwest. They obtained $30.

The "rusty gun" bandit, got $55 from a Lord Baltimore filling station at Rhode Island and Eastern avenues northeast. Paul Houston, 28, of 3211 Wheeler road southeast, attendant, told police a colored man entered the station and asked to use the washroom. When he emerged, Houston said, he pointed a rusty pistol at the attendant and demanded money.

Two small colored boys yesterday strong-armed Claude Barrett, 14, of 139 E street southeast, at New Jersey and Virginia avenues southeast, he told police, and robbed him of $30 he was taking home to a brother. Shortly after, two colored boys were arrested and the money was recovered.

Zoo Director and Wife Entertain National Geographic Society Audience With Tales of Collecting Journey to Orient.

Zoo Director William M. Mann, who trembles more at the sight of a great audience than of a hungry tiger on the loose, successfully negotiated some 3,000 wild animal devotees last night, regaling them with tales of his recent collecting expdeition to the Dutch East Indies.

Opening the Fifty-first annual series of National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall to a near-capacity throng that was alternately amused and amazed by the sights and sounds laid before them.

His talk was illustrated with motion and still pictures, the latter in color. They traced the National Geographic-Smithsonian expedition from the Manns' departure last January, through Japan, China, Singapore, Sumatra and Ceram right down to the arrival of the freighter Silverash with its wild cargo in New York six weeks ago.

Taking turns before the platform amplifier, Dr. and Mrs. Mann between them told about their visit with a Sumatran rajah who has been keeping his dead father in a living room coffin for 13 years; the narrow escape of Lyang Gaddi, their guide, from the maw of a giant python; the terrific heat and stiff gales at sea which threatened the collection of 1,000 specimens, and the sampling of an exotic plant that tastes like vanilla ice cream combined with fried opinions.

Hundreds of children were in the audience but they were not the only ones who applauded gaily when the movies showed a gibbon wrestling with the expedition's tiger mascot and the trained elephant in Tokyo's zoo which balances itself on a small stump.

Perhaps the funniest closeup, though, if volume of laughter is any criterion, was that of the feet of young Batak girls performing a tribal dance for the visitors. Close runners-up were the shots of a pair of Himalayan bear at play, a gibbon examining the blond head of Malcolm Davis, bird curator at the Zoo and a member of the expedition, and the view of a mean looking Florida alligator with Mrs. Mann's accompanying remark: "My husband's idea of a fine good-will gift!"

Davis and Roy Jennier, the Zoo's mammal curator, and who was another member of the expedition, sat on the platform during the lecture. They and the Manns were introduced by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society.

'Unknown' Suicide Of Armistice Day Here Identified

The man who preferred to die as "the unknown" and killed himself by swallowing poison in his hotel room in the 600 block of F street northwest Armistice Day, was unknown no longer yesterday.

Through his fingerprints he was identified as Private William G. Hecker, U. S. A., a veteran enlisted man, of Fort Barksdale, La. Unable to learn much from the rambling note the victim left beside the half-drained poison bottle, police took his fingerprints and sent them to the War Department, where identification was effected.

Citizen Group Asks New Fare Hearing

The Brightwood Citizens' Association, protesting the increase in the cost of street car tokens, last night demanded a rehearing of the Capital Transit Co. petition for a higher fare.

Acting on motion of William McK. Clayton, whose opposition to the transit company has brought him repeatedly into the public eye, the association adopted a resolution that protested the six for 50 cents token rate and asked restroation of $1 weekly pass.

It was also voted to ask Congress to take action on reviving the office of People's Counsel, left vacant since the resignation of William A. Roberts.

Pay of Third Of Waitresses Less Than $10

Wage Board to Meet Friday to Pick Worker Representatives.

Figures showing that a substantial percentage of women workers in local hotels and restaurants are paid less than $15 a week and in many cases below $10 were disclosed at a mass meeting yesterday under auspices of the District Minimum Wage Board in the board room of the District Building.

Mrs. William Kittle, board chairman cited results of a survey by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department covering 2,400 employes in nine hotels, 3,800 workers in 77 restaurants, and 459 employes in ten store restaurants.

The investigators found that 47.9 per cent of the employes in the hotels proper were paid less than $15 a week and 35.7 per cent in hotel dining departments earned less than $10 a week.

Among the independent restaurant workers 39.3 per cent were paid less than $10, and 43 per cent of the employes in store restaurants made less than $15.

Mrs. Kittle added that the survey did not take into account any allowances for free meals or lodging.

Under the wage scale fixed for hotel and restaurant workers before the minimum wage law was declared invalid, however, only $2 a week and 30 cents a meal could be deducted from the basic $16.50 wage.

Arthur L. Schoenthal, labor member of the board, warned employers that they could be prosecuted for any interference in the election of representatives of the workers to the conference. He also pointed out that employers may be sued for failure to pay the minimum wage.

Schoenthal said the cost of living estimates used in the retail trade hearing will be used as a basis for the hotel and restaurant inquiry.

Asked whether tips will be considered part of the basic pay of waitresses, Schoenthal said the question will have to be decided by the nine-man conference and the wage board. Under the former scale, however, tips were not permitted to be included.

Another meeting was scheduled for 9 o'clock next Friday night to pick nine nominees for employe representation on the conference. From these nine the board will select three, who will sit with an equal number of employer representatives and a similar group of public spokesmen.

Betty Hutto Made G. W. Sweetheart By One Vote Edge

Elected by one vote, Miss Betty Hutto, Chi Omega, stepped onto the stage of the Capitol Theater last night to receive the trophy which is to become an annual award to the girl chosen as George Washington University "Sweetheart."

She will be a guest of honor at the G. W.-North Dakota State football game this afternoon and lead the grand march at the Homecoming Ball tonight.

Miss Hutto received 245 votes to 244 for Miss Mary Lou Nash, Kappa Kappa Gamma. Miss Nash and the next three leaders in the voting, Miss Jean Wolfe, Phi Sigma Sigma; Miss Doris Moon, Kappa Delta, and Miss Marty Colmetz, Alpha Delta Pi, served as maids of honor to the "Sweetheart."

Other features of last night's G. W. Homecoming program at the Capitol were a skit on campus politics; music by the university band and glee club, and brief speeches by President Cloyd H. Marvin, Coach Jim Pixlee and C. C. Finnegan, mentor of the North Dakota State squad.

This Morning

Once Upon a Time at Windsor.

By Shirley Povich.

Douglas, Wyoming, breaks into print because there on a farm in the cow country a 21-year-old patriarch of the race tracks breathes his last. Sir Barton, fat and sway-backed in his sedentary days, had been in well-earned retirement of 17 years. He had been the Wonder Horse.

POVICH.

That is, Sir Barton had been the Wonder Horse until the season of 1920 produced a new champion—a bad-acting son of Fair Play named Man o' War. Then Sir Barton went into eclipse, but remaining on the record books were his feats of winning the Big Three of America's stakes—the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont. First to achieve that distinction was the Canadian-owned son of Star Shoot.

And so, when the 3-year-old Man o' War captured stake after stake in 1920, duplicating many of Sir Barton's triumphs of the year before, it was inevitable that turfdom would demand a match between Sir Barton and Man o' War.

$75,000 Purse Offered.

The Kenilworth Jockey Club, at Windsor, Canada, outbid all other tracks for the match race. An offer of a purse of $75,000 plus a $5,000 gold cup to the winner gained the interest of the owners of the Glen Riddle Farm, for which Man o' War ran, and of Commander J. K. L. Ross, the Montreal sportsman who owned Sir Barton. The match was made for October 12, 1920.

• • • •

Sir Barton, as a 4-year-old, was the champion among the older horses. Four straight victories in important stakes of 1920 were to Sir Barton's credit when Commander Ross accepted the match with Man o' War. The Canadian colt was conceded to be the only horse with the barest chance to beat the sensational son of Fair Play.

• • • •

Only once had Man o' War been beaten in his 2-year career on the turf. That defeat came as a 2-year-old when the appropriately named Upset won by a neck at Sarratoga and the thousands of fans in the stands vigorously booed Jockey Johnny Loftus for his poor ride on Man o' War. But Man o' War gained revenge on Upset as a 3-year-old, beating his conqueror four straight times.

• • • •

Thirteen consecutive races Man o' War had won as he came up to the match race. He was to get a weight concession of 6 pounds against the 4-year-old Sir Barton, who was assigned 126 pounds. Race followers of two continents were in a dither as the Windsor race approached. From England, France, Canada and the United States, racegoers began to converge. Enrico Caruso was to occupy a grandstand box.

• • • •

Earl Sande Deposed.

Anticipating a record race throng for Canada, Kenilworth track officials placed mutuel tickets on sale the day before the race. Owner Riddle led a party of friends from Havre de Grace, where Man o' War had been racing, to the Canadian track. Owner Ross chartered a special car for his friends from Saratoga, scene of Sir Barton's latest triumphs.

• • • •

And then, on the morning of the race, Commander Ross let fall a bombshell. He was changing riders. In an eleventh-hour switch, he deprived Earl Sande of the mount on Sir Barton, gave job to Frankie Keogh. Guy Bedwell, Ross' trainer, inspired the shift. Sande, he said, had been riding timidly in recent races. It was the first and last accusation of timidity on the part of Sande, who was to blossom as one of the nerviest riders on the track.

• • • •

Kummer was aboard Man o' War, even as he had been in the colt's greatest races. The odds board left no doubt as to the actual and sentimental favorite of the crowd. From the outset, Man o' War was a heavy favorite. He was to face the post as a 1-to-20 shot. The odds against Sir Barton were 111 to 20.

• • • •

To Keogh, Trainer Bedwell gave detailed instructions: "Shake him up frequently," he told Sir Barton's rider. "Use the whip hard and often, and try to go to the front. He is a game colt and can stand punishment." Young Louis Feustel, Riddle's trainer, had only brief instructions for Kummer: "Use your own judgment," he told Man o' War's Boy. "Ride as if it were just another race."

• • • •

Outbreaks Man o' War.

With his characteristic bad behavior, Man o' War twice broke the webbing at the standing start. But after 55 seconds, Starter Morrissey sent them away. And then, wonder of wonders, Sir Barton outbroke Man o' War, the famous breaker. Keogh had been alert. A full length in front the Canadian horse bounded as the race began.

• • • •

Nose to tail and tail to nose, Sir Barton and Man o' War raced past the stands to the first turn, but Man o' War was gaining. At the turn, he had headed the 4-year-old, and then, when straightened out, Kummer gave him free rein. With amazingly gigantic strides (each of Man o' War's leaps covered 27 feet), Kummer's mount quickly put three lengths between the pair.

• • • •

O'Hara, 2 Politicians Indicted in Track Row

Two Narragansett Aides and Association Are Also Accused as Federal Grand Jury Orders Inquiry Into Alleged Graft Payments.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—The Rhode Island "civil war" between Race Magnate Walter O'Hara and Gov. Robert E. Quinn was brought to a sensational climax here today. A Federal grand jury, meeting to return indictments against O'Hara and two of his henchmen, ordered an investigation of public officials who have accepted funds paid them for "reasons unexplained or not apparent."

The grand jury also returned indictments against O'Hara and two State Democratic leaders for alleged violations of the Federal corrupt practices act.

O'Hara, owner of rich Narragansett Park, stated publicly when his track was closed by Quinn for the fall meeting that he had "taken good care of" certain politicians. These same politicians, he complained, had turned against him and closed his track. The final day of the "raceless" meeting was today.

Four Counts Against O'Hara.

O'Hara was indicted in four counts. William A. Shawcross, chairman of the Democratic State committee, was indicted in two counts, and Thomas A. Kennelly, former chairman, in one count.

Investigation disclosed, the jury reported, that the racing association had paid "close to $100,000 of its funds within a single year" to committees and persons closely identified with political activities.

Indictments were returned against the racing association, Michael J. Regan, assistant treasurer of the association, and James E. Dooley, former vice president, as well as O'Hara, Shawcross and Kennelly.

Four Count: Cited.

Judge John C. Mahoney, to whom the jury reported, read the indictments. United States Attorney J. Howard McGrath said the defendants would be arraigned at their convenience.

The grand jury also recommended a State corrupt practices act in line with Federal legislation and termed the records of the Democratic State committee "woefully incomplete."

Gov. Quinn, who has led an attempt to force O'Hara from the directorship of Narragansett race track, said he favored enactment of a State corrupt practices act.

The grand jury has been considering alleged donations to political organizations by the racing association since its recent reconvention by McGrath.

Montague Beats Ruth.

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—John Montague and Babe Ruth, who meet in a match for charity at the fresh Meadow Country Club at Flushing Sunday, played a nine-hole practice round today, with Montague winning by two strokes. Montague shot 35 and Ruth 37.

Fight Results

Gunnar Barlund, 200, Finland, stopped Hans Haverlick, 188½, Austria (9); Henry Cooper, 189½, Brooklyn, outpointed Charley Jackson, 174½, Macon, Ga. (6); Harley O'Del, 196½, Ottumwa, Iowa, outpointed Al Mitchell, 189½, New York (4); Allie Stolz, 122, Newark, N. J., stopped Ricardo Nunes, 121, Philippines (2); Mario Caroselli, 162½, Italy, outpointed Glen Schramm, 163½, Pittsburgh, Pa. (6).

Roanoke, Va.—Norment Quarles scored a decisive technical knockout over Al Dunbar, rugged New York City lightweight, here tonight in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout which marked the renewal of professional boxing in Roanoke, after a lethargy of two years.

Boston—Ralph Zannelli, Providence (R. I.) welterweight, ran his string of professional fight victories to 26 tonight by winning a split 10-round decision from Bobby Pacho, veteran Mexican battler from Los Angeles, at the Boston Garden. Zannelli weighed 145 and Pacho 147½.

Pro Gridmen Set for Bucs

Flaherty Sends Eleven Through Drills.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 12.—Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Washington Redskins, satisfied that his attack will function smoothly on Sunday, today emphasized defensive line play as the Redskins prepared for the battle with Pittsburgh's Pirates.

With vivid but not fond memories of the manner in which "Bull" Karcis ripped through the Washington line in the last meeting between the Redskins and the Pirates, Flaherty sent his men through a prolonged defensive drill today.

Pittsburgh is expected to turn out to the number of 20,000 for the game. Slingin' Sammy Baugh, whose appearances this season have helped to set attendance records in both Philadelphia and Brooklyn, is being liberally publicized as the greatest pro-league attraction to appear at Pittsburgh this season.

Coach Flaherty has indicated that both Baugh and his running star, Cliff Battles, will see action from start to finish unless the Redskins amass a comfortable lead. Flaherty is hinting also that Dixie Howell, a late starter with the Washington club, will find his way into the Redskins' backfield frequently. Howell, in the recent exhibition game at Charleston, W. Va., starred in both passing and running roles.

Should the Redskins beat the Pirates and the New York Giants lose to the Detroit Lions on Sunday, the Washington club will move into the lead in the Eastern Division of the league.

Derby Dick Thompson, Noted Trainer, Dies

Chief Trainer for Col. E. R. Bradley for 20 Years Was Well Known in District Race Circles; Had Much Success With Bradley Fillies.

By Walter Haight.

At the hour he had expected to be in the crowd gathering for Bowie's opening program yesterday, Henry J. Thompson, famous horsemen, was found unconcious in a Baltimore hotel. A few minutes later he was pronounced dead of a heart attack by Dr. K. C. Keyser, and one of the country's foremost handlers of thoroughbred horses had passed to the land of no photo finishes.

"Derby Dick", he was for 20 years chief trainer for Col. E. R. Bradley, the Kentuckian, and long among the Nation's most respected horsemen. Thompson saddled all the Derby winners that brought fame and fortune to the green and white of the Bradley Stable. Noted for his patience, Thompson was especially successful with fillies and conditioned and saddled a long string of horsedom's fair sex. In fact, a filly first brought Thompson to the front as a trainer.

He prepared Busy Signal, a foal of 1917, for the races and the filly gained world prominence. Other fillies, through the years, with which Thompson gained fame were Blue Warble, Baba Kenny, Betty Beall, Barn Swallow, Bit of White, Blossom Time, Bloodroot and Black Helen.

Gets Odd Nickname.

Thompson acquired the nickname of "Derby Dick" after Bubbling Over won the Derby in 1926. His first triumph in the Kentucky classic came in 1921 when he not only saddled the winner, Behave Yourself, but also saddled Black Servant, which finished second. In Bubbling Over's year, Thompson again sent the one-two combination to the post, Bagenbaggage taking the place money.

In 1924 Thompson groomed Beau Butler for the Derby, and the colt took down third money. His next Derby winners were in consecutive years. He sent Burgoo King out to take the measure of a classy field in 1932 and the following year watched Brokers Tip jolt the Nation by his Derby triumph.

Won With Kalitan.

Thompson also was successful in the Preakness, and he trained his first winner of the Maryland stake in 1917 when Kalitan, owned by Bradley, scored.

Asked recently what horse he considered the best among those he had trained, Thompson chose Blue Larkspur. This colt was a frequent stake winner but did not take down money in a Derby or Preakness.

Thompson was at Pimlico Thursday as that track closed. It was there that he saddled his last winner a week ago, Bradley's Baby League, which won by four lengths.

The trainer was 62 years old and had been around horses from the time he first walked. He was a quiet man, able to control his emotions, no matter how exciting the situation.

Sir Barton Dies; Famous Old Racer

By the Associated Press.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 12.—Sir Barton, one of the highest-priced sires on the continent and outmatched in his hey-dey only by the great Man o' War, is dead on a farm at Douglas, Wyo., where he had lived in retirement for more than 17 years.

Formerly owned by Commander J. K. L. Ross, of Montreal, Sir Barton was recognized as the greatest thoroughbred ever to carry a Canadian owner's colors on the turf. During three years of racing—1918, 1919 and 1920—he earned $116,857. His progeny have played a major part in the racing world, but none reached the heights Sir Barton scaled.

Sir Barton's racing career came to an end in 1920 after the 4-year-old son of Star Shoot—Lady Starling met Samuel Riddle's Man o' War in a match race at Kenilworth Race Track, Windsor. Abe Orpen, dean of Canadian racing, who died this year, promoted the race. A purse of $80,000 was offered and more than 37,000 race fans saw Sir Barton beaten by Riddle's famous money-winner.

Sir Barton was ailing at the time and was no match for the United States champion. He finished seven lengths in the rear.

Sir Barton's record of 13 victories in 31 starts did not compare with Man O' War's one loss in 21 trips to the post, but his name was engraved in turf history as the first of four horses to win the triple crown for 3-year-olds—the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

Hoyas Seek Second Victory Against N. Y. U.

A Staff Correspondent.

This will be the ninth meeting between the schools and odds are about even on the eventual outcome, although any edge—if any—must be in New York's favor. The Violet holds the upper hand in the series, having won four games to Georgetown's two.

Coached by Dr. Mal Stevens, who took his football course at Yale and later coached there, New York has enjoyed a fairly successful season thus far, taking four of six games. Its most important victories were an 18-14 upset of Carnegie Tech, and last week's 14-7 triumph over Colgate. In between, however, it dropped a 19-6 decision to North Carolina, and 13-0 game to Lafayette's surprising eleven.

Georgetown has not won a single game since topping an impotent Shenandoah eleven in the curtain raiser, 28-0, but has given evidence of vast improvement in its last three games. The high lights of the Hoyas' season thus far were a scoreless tie with Penn, and 6-6 stalemate accomplished last Saturday against West Virginia.

Tomorrow's game finds the combatants on fairly even terms. Georgetown has been handicapped the last few weeks by a heavy siege of injuries, but, like Notre Dame, seems to have improved rather than declined. Tomorrow Jim Hill, star lineman, and Bill Dooley, a fine defensive player and blocking back, will be out because of injuries.

But New York University is not exactly at its best, having lost the services of Harry Shorten, best ball carrier on the squad, who broke an ankle bone in the last few minutes of the Colgate game. But Stevens still has his passing ace, Bernie Bloom, and a host of others to carry the mail. It was Bloom's pass that enabled New York to tie Georgetown in the closing minutes of last year's game.

Georgetown's starting line-up will have Capt. Larry Hardy at center; Lew Shuker and Johnny Frank, guards; Joe Frank and Clem Stralka, tackles; Al Snyder and Johnny Cavadine, ends; Tom Keating, quarterback; Joe Mellendick and Charley Wychumas, halfbacks, and "Bull" Darmohray, fullback.

Hagerty was customarily pessimistic tonight, refusing to commit himself to more than "We'll do our best and make a real game of it." But deep down inside Hagerty harbors a feeling that N. Y. U. will be his team's initial victim.

Georgetown's attack will center around its sensational sophomore, Joe Mellendick, and an aerial attack. Mellendick, a triple-threater in every sense of the word, is a genuine threat, and as he goes so go the Hoyas.

Dunn's 71-Yd. Run With Punt Features

Miami Gains 7-0 Lead in First Half; Aerial Attack Backfires and Leads to Two Touchdowns; Miami Holds on Own 7-Yard Line.

Orange Bowl, Fla., Nov. 12.—Miami made three swift touchdown thrusts in the second and fourth quarters tonight to overpower Catholic University of Washington, 21 to 0, before 10,072 persons.

Halfback Eddie Dunn made 9 yards off tackle and Miami scored from 37 yards out on the next play. Chesna darted through the line on a quick opening play, stiff-armed Vidnovic and cantered across. Capt. Bob Masterson place-kicked the extra point.

Catholic threatened twice in the third period but pass interceptions halted the advances.

Goes 71 Yards.

Early in the last period Dunn took Rocco Pirro's punt on the Miami 29, slithered through the Catholic squad, cut toward the sideline and raced 71 years to a touchdown. Masterson again converted.

Shortly after the next kickoff Johnny Belash, substitute Miami end, intercepted Frank Krawczel's pass on the Catholic 34 and the Hurricanes went on to a third score. Dunn lofted a long pass intended for Bolash, but Charles Munhall, Catholic quarterback, batted it into Masterson's hands on the goal line. Masterson calmly kicked the extra point.

After the Miami offensive had stalled deep in Catholic territory twice in the first period, halfback Lou Chesna gave the hurricanes a third chance by intercepting one of Burke Vidnovic's long passes in the second quarter. Chena ran the ball back to the Catholic 45 and Miami went from there in a hurry.

First Period.

After an exchange of punts Miami marched 49-yards to Catholic's 13-yard line where the visitors held and took the ball on downs. Dunn's dashes of 14 and 22-yards featured the advance. Catholic struck through the air and on passes from Vidnovic to Guyon and Munhall reached Miami's 30, but was set back 15-yards here because of backfield in motion. After another punt exchange, Dixon intercepted Munhall's at midfield. Chesna got 23-yards through tackle and lateraled to Douglas for 13 more. The visitors again held for downs and Vidnovic punted out to midfield as the period ended. Miami, 0; Catholic University, 0.

Second Period.

With Chesna and Jones, a substitute halfback, cracking the line, Miami advanced to Catholic's 20-yard line and again the drive bogged down. The visitors drew another 15-yard penalty, backfield in motion, and Vidnoc punted. Chesna punted back. Vidnock picked up 11 yards off tackle but on the next play attempted a pass and it was intercepted by Chesna, who returned it to Catholic's 45. Dunn got eight yards through tackle before Chesna darted off tackle on a quick-opening play, got in the open, stiff-armed Vidnovic and crossed the goal line standing up. Masterson place-kicked the extra point.

Late in the period Kasunich recovered Douglas' fumble for Catholic on Miami's 21-yard line. Vidnovic passed, but it was intercepted by Dixon on the 14 and Miami punted out of danger as the half ended. Score: Miami, 7; Catholic University, 0.

Third Period.

Catholic failed to gain after receiving the kick-off and Vidnovic punted. On a reverse from Douglas, Dunn fumbled and Calabrese recovered for the visitors on Miami's 19. Sarelas and Vidnovic made first down on the 9-yard line and Guyon got two more at tackle. Vidnovic tried a pass, but it was intercepted by Ssaky on the 10, and Chesna punted out of danger. Catholic kept the ball in Miami's territory, a 19-yard punt return by Vidnovic featuring the action. It reached Miami's 25-yard line, but, after Vidnovic shot three short passes to Kasunich, Rogers and Munhall, Walker tried one and it was intercepted by Dixon as the period ended. Score: Miami, 7; Catholic University, 0.

Fourth Quarter.

Miami punted and Catholic lost ground in recovering two of its own fumbles. Dunn received Pirro's punt, got loose through the Catholic team, went to the side line and raced 71 yards to a touchdown. Masterson placekicked the point and Miami led, 14 to 0.

Miami immediately struck for another touchdown as Catholic took to the airlines after receiving the kick-off. Bolash intercepted Krawczel's pass on the Catholic's 34. Dunn lofted a pass intended for Bolash, but Munhall batted it into the arms of Masterson, who fell over the goal line. Masterson place-kicked

Pitt and Irish Given Call in Tilts Today

Yale Picked to Win Over Princeton, Penn to Beat Michigan.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

From Hanover, N. H., to Houston, Tex., more collegiate arenas will be packed to capacity by the football faithful than on any Saturday this season. In the big leagues alone, at least seven of the day's outstanding offerings will draw full houses of cash customers, while ticket scalpers reach a rich harvest.

Sellout crowds of 80,000 and 71,000 respectively, will witness the Army-Notre Dame and Pittsburgh-Nebraska headliners but the East also will give classic proof that commercialism isn't the only gridiron objective. Only 15,000, all the little stadium can accommodate in the New Hampshire hills, will see Cornell challenge Dartmouth in an "Ivy League" standout that would fill any park in the East. Even in the "Ivy League," however, this hurts.

Minnesota has lost two games but not its drawing power, as indicated by the prospect of a near-sellout crowd of 62,000 for the game with Northwestern. The South's biggest turnout, 40,000, is expected to pack the stadium at Durham for a renewal of the rivalry between Duke and North Carolina. Rice, back in the Southwest chips, has the S. R. O. sign out for its tussle with Texas A. and M.

INTERSECTIONAL FEATURES.

Pittsburgh-Nebraska (71,000)—Biff Jones, the old artilleryman, has his Cornhuskers primed to take aim and shoot the works. That means another tough defensive hurdle for the Panther to clear, but Nebraska doesn't figure to have enough stuff to check Goldberg, Stebbins, Patrick & Co., all afternoon. Pittsburgh.

* * * *

Army-Notre Dame (80,000)—Notre Dame's "cripples" seem to have made a remarkable recovery. Rainy weather and the precedent of underdog uprisings in this brilliant rivalry may help Army's long-shot chances. Otherwise it's difficult to figure the Soldiers beating the team that downed Navy and Minnesota and led Pittsburgh after three periods. Notre Dame.

* * * *

Pennsylvania-Michigan (35,000)—Michigan has bagged three in a row by 1 point. Swinging on the trapeze, Pennsylvania.

* * * *

SECTIONAL HEADLINERS.

Minnesota-Northwestern (62,000)—Just an echo of the 1936 "game of the year," which marked the end of the long Gopher winning streak. Minnesota, shootin' for revenge and Big Ten honors, should win.

* * * *

* * * *

Louisiana State-Auburn (37,000)—This might be a scoreless tie or a touchdown spree. On a reverse to the weak side, Auburn.

* * * *

* * * *

Yale-Princeton (50,000)—More tradition than argument. Yale.

* * * *

Dartmouth-Cornell (15,000)—Cornell's line may force the breaks and spill those deep reverses but Dartmouth, on its backfield versatility, figures to win.

McAuliffe Quits Ring; Gives Title to Lavigne

Police Gazette Belt, Symbolic of Championship, Rests in Pawn but Jack Presents the Kid With Ticket at Elaborate Celebration.

By Harry Ferguson,
United Press Staff Writer.

(Editor's note—Following is the last of a series on the life of Jack McAuliffe, retired undefeated lightweight champion.)

New York, Nov. 12.—There was a great celebration, dinner and wine in New York on March 2, 1897, when Jack McAuliffe formally turned over the lightweight championship to Kid Lavigne.

Lavigne got it the same way McAuliffe did—as a gift, and then it was up to him to defend it the best way he could. The climax of the ceremony was the presentation to Lavigne of the Police Gazette belt which McAuliffe held as a symbol of his championship.

"Several months before," McAuliffe said, "I had pawned the belt in one of my moments of financial depression. I looked through all my trunks and the belt wasn't there. It was too late to go to a pawnshop, for I was due on the platform in ten minutes. I stood beside Lavigne and somebody began making a speech:

"'And now, ladies and gentlemen,' the fellow said, 'Jack McAuliffe will turn over to Kid Lavigne the famous Police Gazette belt, symbol of supremacy in the lightweight ranks.'

* * * *

After that, McAuliffe's participation in boxing was chiefly that of a spectator. He attended almost all the championship fights and out of his experience he formed certain general conclusions about modern-day fighters.

"The best possible bout I could imagine," he said "would be between Jack Dempsey, the modern heavyweight, and John L. Sullivan when each of them was in his prime. It might not be a scientific boxing bout, but it would be the greatest slugging match of all time. And I'm sure somebody would get knocked out before the sixth round. Who would win? Whoever got in the first hard punch, I would say, and nobody can tell who that would be.

* * * *

"I never saw a man with more confidence than Gene Tunney, and confidence is one of the things a fighter needs most. I talked with him just before his first fight with Dempsey and bluntly told him that Dempsey was a harder hitter and a more aggressive fighter. Tunney was winding tape around his hands and he said calmly: 'I'm going to defeat him because I am a better boxer and am faster.' He called the turn all right.

"You can't overestimate the value of a good second to a fighter. Luis Firpo might have been champion of the world if he had had a good second. The night he fought Dempsey there was only one person in his corner who could speak English, a Negro rubber. I sat right behind Firpo's corner. Dempsey scored a knock-down and it seemed to me that he hit Firpo again before he was all the way off the floor. I said to the Negro, 'Why don't you claim a foul?' He said, 'They won't let me.'

* * * *

"I remember one instance of how a second helped a fighter more than anybody realized. It was in the Jeffries-Sharkey fight. Tommy Ryan was Jeffries' second. Jeffries was badly winded and wasn't doing so well. Between rounds Ryan loosened the strings of one of Jeffries' gloves and when they started fighting again the glove came off. The referee had to stop the fight long enough to get Jeffries' glove back on, and the minute or so of rest was very helpful."

Terps Meet Lion Eleven

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewiston, Pa., Nov. 12.—Maryland's iron-man eleven, one of the East's most consistent football winners this season, rested here tonight on the eve of its important tussle with Penn State at State College. This is Maryland's first invasion of this section in two decades, and the visitors are given an even chance against their hosts.

While the Terrapins are at full strength for the game, Penn State, which toppled its ancient rival, Penn, last Saturday, will be without the services of two ace backs, Harry Harrison and Sammy Donato, who are out with injuries.

Coach Frank Dobson announced that his starting line-up will be virtually the same that has started the last two games. Smith and McCarthy will be at ends; Albarano and Brown, tackles; Surgent and Wolfe, guards; Walton, center; Weidinger, quarterback; Meade and Skotnicki, halves; and Frank DeArmey, fullback. McCarthy replaces Bill Bryant.

State fans are hopeful of getting a glimpse of Pershing Mondorff, Maryland's sensational sophomore field goal kicker. The Nittany Lions have a defense for everything but field goals, and they are hoping Mondorff gets no chance to try one.

It was no contest. At the far turn, Kummer again gave Man o' War his head. His three-length margin widened to six as they turned into the stretch. Over his shoulder, Kummer took three, four guarded looks at the trailing Sir Barton, actually eased Man o' War up as he crossed the finish line seven lengths in front.

Gallaudet Seeks Second Grid Win

Gallaudet University's rough and ready football team will oppose the Shepherd Teachers College team today, in the last home game on the Kendall-Greener's home schedule. The game is set on the Gallaudet field at 2:30.

Race Drake, shifty running back, will again be cast in the leading role of running back, and should attempts to shake him loose succeed, it is not at all improbable that Gallaudet though the under-dog will score a victory over the Virginians.

Abrams Foe Won't Fight Next Week

Finazzo Claims He Is Hurt; Prevost Will Meet Local Boy.

Bobby North, who has been somewhat of an "evil eye" while piloting Cristobal Jaramillo, thinks the Puerto Rican influence will be too much for Lou Gevinson Monday night, and informed Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday that he would be willing to wager his share of the purse that Jaramillo would whip the local lefty in their ten-round feature match at Turner's Arena.

"Dat's confidence for you," Ahearn said, "and I tink dat Twomey, who manages Lou, will tink tree times before accepting."

Overshadowing, perhaps, the announcement that North was pretty confident about his Puerto Rican champion knocking off Gevinson was the declaration by George Abrams' manager, Sid Fishel, that Vic Finazzo, scheduled to meet Abrams, had deliberately run out on the match.

Ahearn received word from Finazzo's manager that Vic had suffered a broken blood vessel in his nose while training, but Fishel poo-pohed this, declaring, "Finazzo is afraid of George."

Finazzo is the Baltimorean who beat Ivan Nedomatsky when the former Maryland star fought under an assumed name in Harrisburg, Pa., last summer, and was to have been Abram's toughest opponent of all the eleven he has met.

But Ahearn went to work, burned up the wires, and arranged for Sergeo Prevost, the Russian-born middleweight from Mississippi, to meet Abrams in the six-round semi-windup. Prevost, son of a Russian Cossack, is remembered for his smashing victory over Hobo Williams a few weeks ago at the Arena. A careful fighter with an awkward style, Prevost has quite a record, and Abrams can stamp himself ready for headline matches if he whips the Russian.

In other supporting matches closed out yesterday Vince Carino, Richmond ace, will meet Augie Crow, Baltimore, and Doug Swetnam, local lad, will face Jimmy Leo, Baltimore—both four-rounders.

Wilson Teachers Face Millersville In Homecoming

Refreshed by a two-week layoff from competition and encouraged by a rousing pep rally held yesterday in their honor, Wilson Teacher's College gridmen face Millersville State Teachers College's eleven today at Central High Stadium. The first home game on the Wilson schedule, the homecoming, is listed for 2:45.

Eager to record its first victory since 1935, the first year of football at the Harvard Street School, Wilson will send a strong line-up onto the field against a team that figures to be several touchdowns stronger. Millersville, a Pennsylvania school, lost to Shippensburg, last week, 7-0, while Wilson bowed earlier in the year by the score of 37-0.

Hopkins Foe Of American

Welch Takes His Club to Baltimore.

Coach Gus Welch will lead his American University football team to Baltimore this afternoon to oppose Johns Hopkins University's eleven in quest of the Eagles' second victory.

Since the Massachusetts avenue school registered a 12-0 triumph over Bridgewater in its first game of the season, victory has come about as often as June in January. A lone tie with St. John's is the best the Eagles can show since the Bridgewater game, having lost to Dickinson, William and Mary and Randolph-Macon.

Last year American defeated the Blue Jays in the first game of the renewed rivalry, 14-6, but must be rated a slight under-dog today. Welch has shifted his line-up in an attempt to strengthen his forward wall, which was badly shaken in last week's fray with Randolph-Macon.

Sam Harris and Johnny Jablonski, backs, have been shifted to the guard positions and Joe Britton, who has seen service at tackle, has been shifted to center. Same Maize, regular center for the last two years, has been inserted in the backfield, where he will operate with Nelson, Howard and Toner.

Pirro returned the next kick-off to Catholic's 20, and the Cardinals, aided by penalties, moved 60 yards. Walker and Vidnovic got a first down. Walker got 15 more through line and Miami drew two 15-yard penalties for unnecessary roughness, placing the ball on Miami's 20. Four Catholic passes fell incomplete, Walker dropping one from Fiorellino in clear, and Miami took the ball. Chesna punted to Catholic's 41 as the game ended.

Gonzagans, St. Johns Will Clash Today

Game Set for 2:30 P. M. at Catholic U. May Decide Title.

One of the most colorful and bitterest local grid rivalries will be renewed this afternoon when those ancient foes, Gonzaga and St. John's, clash, rain or shine, at Catholic University Stadium, in the game that will decide the prep championship.

Also there is a possibility that the winning team will be recognized as the outstanding scholastic eleven of the city, because between the two, Gonzaga and St. John's have more than held their own with interhigh foes. Gonzaga decisively trounced the defending champion Tech team, 20-0; defeated Central, 6-0, but was upset by Eastern, 13-0, in a contest played in deep mud.

However, St. John's, in its opening game of the season, clearly outplayed Eastern in gaining a scoreless tie. The Johnnies dropped a tough 7-6 battle to Western High School, but were playing without their ace back, Bill O'Connor. This same O'Connor may mean the difference between victory and defeat this afternoon.

O'Connor has been laid up for a month with injuries but is expected to start against Gonzaga. If he does make an appearance, St. John's will take the field only a slight underdog. It has been a slow, unsteady offense that has handicapped the Cadets all season and O'Connor is the man who would add zip and power to the attack.

Gonzaga may be without the services of Al Fennell, its star running guard. Fennell was forced to bed early this week with a heavy cold and high temperature and his presence in the starting line up is still doubtful. With his exception, Coach Orrel Mitchell's defending titlists will be at full strength.

Jim Shaw, Jim Ellis, Eddie Shea and Louis Difilippo, the city's speediest and best backfield, will be Gonzaga's hope for another prep championship. St. John's has a clever passer in Frank Cady but no dangerous ball-carrier, provided O'Connor does not play. The Johnnies have a fine pair of ends in Frank Neuland and Jim Geibel, who may be able to halt Gonzaga's fleet backs. Their center, Elwood Barrett, is the equal of any in town.

Ickes Thrills Fans; 'Little Hoyas' Lose

Indians Score Early on Georgetown Prep; Gordon Stars.

By Bob Garrison.

An early touchdown in the first quarter and a safety that preceded it gave the Indians an 8-0 lead that was never overcome. A third period touchdown gave them their 14 points before a sustained drive from midfield by the Little Hoyas resulted in a last-quarter touchdown.

Bob "Flash" Gordon, shifty back, led the newcomers to school-boy football to their fourth straight triumph, scoring both touchdowns. He carried the ball over the goal from the 2-yard line in the first period after a pass—Tom Hutchinson to Faircloth—had gained 30 yards and placed the Redmen in scoring position on the 10.

A lateral pass from Bill Marshall, end, on the 20-yard line was good for the second goal as Gordon went over with a host of Blue tacklers at his heels. A 300-yard pass, Perry Seeman to Marshall, was the first act in the touchdown play, Marshall flipping to Gordon as he was being hauled to the ground.

Although Georgetown Prep was never deep in Anacostia's territory at any time, the prepmen marched to the goal line in the last quarter and were on their way again when the game ended with the ball on Anacostia's 25-yard line in Georgetown's possession.

After they had moved from their own 40-yard line, with Tom Graham and Capt. Ed Cummings leading the way, the Garrett Parkers realized their lone touchdown when Graham shot through left tackle for a 20-yard touchdown dash.

The first score of the game, an automatic safety, was produced when Bill Knot, Anacostia guard, broke through to block Cumming's goal-line punt and the ball bounded clear of the end-zone.

Mt. Pleasanters Clinch Third Place in Race for D. C. Title.

By Jack Munhall.

Led by Fullback Bill Ickes, who gave one of the best ball-carrying exhibitions witnessed this season, Central High School clinched third place in the interhigh football series yesterday, blanking Wilson, 15-0, in the Central Stadium.

Approximately 1,500 fans were in the stands when the game was called but a cold, drenching rain reduced the number more than half before the second period was over. However, those who remained were rewarded with a thrilling battle in which Central produced its best football of the series and also an exhibition by Ickes that was downright startling.

Central made its initial 2 points in the opening minutes of the game. Forced to punt from his own 10-yard stripe, Andy McBride's kick was blocked by Paul Kurtz, Mount Pleasanters' end, and the ball bounded over the end zone to give Central an automatic safety.

In the second quarter Central scored in sudden fashion. Charley Jones, its fine center, darted in front of a pass thrown by Dave Maloney from the Wilson 20, seized the ball on the 35 and raced down the sidelines to register the touchdown without being molested.

Central threatened often in the second half, but was thwarted by Wilson's fighting line, which gave its usual spirited demonstration.

Drive to Touchdown.

In the first few minutes of the third quarter, with Ickes as the motivating power, Central moved from its own 20 to the midfield stripe in one drive and to the Wilson 30 in another before it finally could muster the second score. A coffin-corner boot by Bob Goldsworthy, from the Wilson 38 to the 1, set the stage for the touchdown. Andy McBride, Wilson's kicking center, punted out of danger to Lou Chacos on the Wilson 30, but Chacos twisted his way to the 15 before Buck Barbee and Ed Squires threw him to earth.

Ickes slammed right tackle for a first down on the 3-yard line on an end run which was halted when Barbee knocked him outside and after he carried the ball to the 1 on a smash at right guard, the period ended. When Ickes catapulted through center on the opening play of the last period, it marked the first touchdown a Central back has made this year.

Sports Postscripts

Despite SEABISCUIT'S defeat by ESPOSA in the Bowie Handicap at Pimlico's closing day, the handicap champion is still the favorite in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap in February. TIM MARA, the big New York bookie and sportsman, is said to have plastered plenty of coin of realm on the nag's schnozzle via his No. 1 agent, PLUNGER ART ROONEY, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirate professionals . . . COLLYERS, the racing mag, says that Washington Park, the luckless Chicago track, is on the block to the highest bidder. And MR. O'HARA, the Narragansett warrior, is too busy to look westward . . . 'DIZ' ESLIN winds up a week at the local burlesque theater tonight . . . For future heavyweight honors, watch DR. JACK KEARNS' kid, JIMMY ADAMICK . . .

* * * *

Pitt, Alabama, Fordham, Yale and Dartmouth have already received "feelers" for the annual Rose Bowl game . . . And ALABAMA will probably get the bid . . . Some one suggested that Pitt and Fordham be chosen and told to play until one or the other wins. Which isn't such a bad idea! . . . Why don't we start a Washington Dapper Dan Club? With JACK ESPEY, the Redskins' manager, as president? . . . BEN "EVIL EYE" FINKLE, the Oneonta Ogler, failed to show up in SWEDE OLSEN'S corner at the Arena the other night and about 1,500 were disappointed. The "Evil Eye" is doing nicely, thanks to some well publicity in New York recently . . .

* * * *

And to youse guys who have been saying that WAR ADMIRAL is such a little nag: He's ½-inch taller than SEABISCUIT! . . . GEORGE EARNSHAW, a swell player in his day, is going to Venezuela to coach baseball . . . ED McSWEENEY, who financial edits your favorite morning journal, was a hockey player of note up in Canada some years back. And boasts more ice memories than CHING JOHNSON, the dean of them all . . . Sports circles weren't surprised yesterday with the news that "LITTLE NAPOLEON" BILLY ROSE would wed gorgeous swim star, ELEANOR HOLM. They were seen together practically all of the time last summer in Cleveland . . . Folks are whispering around New York that this fight racket monopoly has gone to such extremes that one man controls eight of the ten highest ranked fighters in one class . . . Personal nomination for the saddest word of football men: "They looked good in defeat!"

Armstrong Signed for Bout

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Damon Runyon announced today he had signed Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles Negro holder of the featherweight championship, for a charity bout to be held in Miami in February or March. Armstrong's opponent has not yet been selected.

Mud May Decide Game Between Bisons, G. W.

Entwined in the tentacles of one of the worst losing streaks to afflict a George Washington eleven since Jim Pixlee assumed control, the Colonials meet a light and lightly regarded North Dakota State eleven this afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

The game features an elaborate homecoming program, which reached a semiclimax last night at a giant pep rally. The kick-off this afternoon is scheduled for 2 p. m.

This game marks the turning point in George Washington's season. Victory may check its downward flight and give it enough impetus to get over its two remaining games with Arkansas and West Virginia. Another defeat, however, will signal the most disastrous season G. W. has experienced under the present regime.

Vic Sampson, quadruple-threat halfback, will lead the team into action. As Sampson goes, so go the Colonials. But with rain forecast today, bringing with it a heavy field, Sampson may be shorn of much of his grid might.

The rest of the line-up will be the same that started against Mississippi last week. Yurwitz and Berry, ends; Jones and Rebholz, tackles; Cottingham and Weinberg, guards; Hallberg, center; Merka, quarterback; B. Nowaskey, at the other halfback, and Turner, fullback.

It will be the last local appearance of ten Colonials in Buff and Blue livery. All are supposed to graduate in June. Included in the group are Joey Kaufman, Bruce Mahan, Howard Tihila, Lou Carroll and Elmer Hogg, backs; Pete Yurwitz, Lloyd Berry, Tippy Hold, Ted Cottingham and Allen Hallberg, linemen.

North Dakota, on a basis of its record, does not seem to be in George Washington's class and does not figure to offer any particular resistence to the local team. "Casey" Finnegan, the Bisons' coach, says his team is the best balanced he's ever had. In Wheeler, Rorvig and Phillips the visitors have a trio of backs that figure to be on par with anybody in George Washington's backfield, excluding Sampson, but the difference between the two is figured in the lines. George Washington's looks a shade better.

'Mysterious Montague' Is Unveiled.

By Jack Cuddy.

Come Sunday at Fresh Meadow, America's most interesting athlete of the moment will launch his public career as a golfer. Barrel-built John Montague will cast aside the mantle of mystery. He will perform with his clubs in the national spotlight for the first time—braving the merciless glare that quickly distinguishes genuine prowess from laughable legend.

* * * *

Favorable chance and Columnist Bill Corum's brain have provided this unveiling with a setting as wholesome as it is novel. Montague will pair with Babe Didrikson against the great Babe Ruth and Sylva (Co) Annenberg, the woman's Long Island champion, for 18 holes. They will tee off at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) over the Fresh Meadow Club course in Flushing, where Gene Sarazen won the U. S. Open in 1932. Proceeds of the exhibition will go to Mayor LaGuardia for distribution among New York's unfortunate or crippled children.

* * * *

In accepting this set-up for his first public appearance, Montague proved that his courage and generosity matched his shrewdness.

* * * *

This combination of Ruth, Monty and a charity for kids serves as a perfect debut vehicle—after Monty's recent legal embroilment at Elizabethtown. Here are two men who became national figures largely through the power of their bodies—Ruth with his home run smashes on the diamond, and Monty with his reportedly tremendous drives down the fairways.

* * * *

Their paths of power, up from childhood, were confronted with many of the same problems and pitfalls now confronting the poor kids they are playing for. Ruth rose from a Baltimore orphanage and became a national idol. Monty's trail was more devious. But now, maybe he, too, is on the verge of becoming a national athletic hero—one of the greatest golfers that ever lived—as his path crosses that of Ruth.

* * * *

A grand set-up indeed! But a man had to be generous to accept it, because it entailed immediate and great sacrifice on Monty's part, just when the iron was hot—just when the echoes were fading in the Elizabethtown courtroom — Monty was forced to idle nearly two weeks in New York. He could have been reaping a rich harvest in professional matches on the Pacific Coast, where his private performances made him the mysterious prince of bunkerland. Contracts for those professional appearances were already drawn. Time marches on, and often opportunity marches with it.

* * * *

Courage was required to accept the exhibition, because it can make of Monty an alibying mountebank or a mighty magician of the courses. Three dangerous foils are being used in the unveiling: Ruth, Didrikson and Annenberg. Monty's position would be less hazardous were he tackling a well-known professional. His discomfiture then would be less intense were he to make a poor showing because of (1) his admitted lack of practice, or (2) lack of ability.

* * * *

It would be difficult for Monty to recover from the blow if beaten by Ruth or either of the two women—because of the heroic halo placed upon him by Hollywood pals and the few sports writers who claim to have witnessed his prodigious feats. Ruth is a far better golfer than most people realize. He plays nearly every day, when not hunting. He has fine competitive spirit and a flair for heroics before a crowd. There'll be a crowd at Fresh Meadow—a gallery of 6,000. Only that number of tickets were printed to prevent the gallery from being too unwieldy.

* * * *

Babe Didrickson drives farther than any other woman player. Some observers insist she can outdrive Babe Ruth. In addition, she plays a well-rounded game. Miss Annenberg also is a long driver and a proven competitor.

* * * *

I hope Montague amazes everyone with his ability. I hope he knocks birdies off telephone wires, as friends say he can do, and I hope he registers a flock of birdie as the cow-pasture circus treks from hole to hole. I hope he emerges from Fresh Meadow as a mighty new sports hero. It's always so tragic and futile to see a legend destroyed.

Landon, St. Alban's Deadlock at 0-0

Landon and Friends battled to a scoreless tie in a renewal of their ancient grid series played yesterday on the St. Alban's field. Although both teams threatened several times, neither was able to muster enough punch to score.

St. Alban's outplayed the visitors during the entire first three quarters, in which it possessed the ball the greater part of the time, but always its offense bogged when near the Landon goal. In the final period Landon rallied and kept St. Alban's on the defensive, but it, too, was unable to function in "pay territory."

Bill Alexandria was conspicuous on the defense for St. Alban's as was Tackle Stonestreet for the Landon team.

Mucho Gusto Is Beaten in Great Race

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 12.—Racing returned to the pine woods section of Prince Georges County today and it was only fitting that the chief victory should go to Mrs. B. F. Christmas' Sunned, from nearby Upper Marlboro. In as close a finish as has ever been witnessed at this track, Sunned won the Blackiston Handicap in a three-way camera decision.

Coming up with a rush on the extreme outside where horses photograph so well, Sunned was credited with a nose triumph over the Araho Stable's Mucho Gusto. The latter had his nose in front of that of the Shandon Farm's Rainland.

It was to the tune of a $36.40 mutuel that Sunned did his stuff this afternoon and he ran the necessary 6 furlongs in 1:13 1-5, creditable time over this track. A field of eight faced the barrier for the $1,200 added contest.

After ten days of perfect racing weather at Pimlico, the Maryland circuit ran into a dreary, chilly day —"typical Bowie weather," as the horsemen say. The frowning skies began to leak just before the day's feature, but the track was fast. A crowd of 8,000 witnessed the sport.

Sunned had to be at his best to take the decision. He lacked the early speed of Mucho Gusto and Rainland. These two teamed up in front of the field and waged a merry duel with first one and then the other having the advantage. Their battle extended right to the wire, but on the outside Sunned was running a sort of private race. Longden put him to a drive in midstretch and the son of Ed Crump gathered momentum with every stride. Nearing the wire, he fairly flew. Three noses stuck out for the wire. Then came the wait, the picture and the decision.

The Canadian-owned Medway Stable sent Akehurst to the post in the first race and the Philippi colt, fresh from Rockingham campaigning, turned in a smashing victory. Jockey R. Eccard sent the colt out of the maiden ranks with a good ride. Stitch in Time was second, beaten a length and a half, with Aethelwold third in the limit field of a dozen. Akehurst paid an $11.30 mutuel.

Eddie H., a member of the mutuel field, led eleven other cheap routers to the wire in the second race, a test of a mile and a sixteenth. Taking the lead in the opening furlong, the son of Sortie was never headed thereafter, but Apprentice Jockey H. Mora had to keep pumping to stave off the closing bid of Gold Cross. Idle Miss went evenly and was third. The field paid $22.10.

Wayne Wright rode J. P. Jones' Yomer to victory in the third race, the filly winning by a length and a quarter over Little Tarzan. Briar Plume was third in the field of twelve. Yomer ran Join Us into defeat and then held sway all the way, bringing her backers a $29.20 mutuel.

Knight Warrior Wins Again.

Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Knight Warrior won his second straight race and gave the favorite players a break in the fifth race. The Crusader colt came through on the inside to grab a nose verdict and again the camera was called on. Alexandrine was placed second and Buck Langhorne third after eight horses had competed at a mile and a sixteenth. Knight Warrior paid a $4.10 mutuel.

A disqualification and the suspension of Jockey Wayne Wright marked the sixth race. Wright had the mount on Xandria and the mare led Copper Tube to the wire by a head margin. However, the stewards, after consulting both Wright and Longden, who rode the second horse, ordered Xandra disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHT WARRIOR, $4.10, $2.80, $2.50; ALEXANDRINE, $4.00, $3.20; BUCK LANGHORNE, $3.30.

KNIGHT WARRIOR, steadied along while close to leaders, saved ground entering stretch and came up on inside with rush to gain decision. ALEXANDRINE shook off DANKE SCHON to take command, set a good pace and looked willingly. BUCK LANGHORNE improved position approaching stretch and closed between leaders. NIGHT BUD saved ground in final quarter. DANKE SCHON quit after following pace for half.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, FAST.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:03. Winner, Dr. Cosden ch. c. (4), by Brilliant—Hipsi. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:40.

†Won, but was disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COPPER TUBE, $8.40, $4.60, $5.10; SEA GULL, $7.20, $6.50; YENOC, $8.00.

XANDRA, under steadying restraint to half pole, improved her position with rush, got to front, but carried COPPER TUBE out badly for which she was disqualified. COPPER TUBE came to outside to make move, came up with XANDRA, but hung after interference. SEA GULL ran YENOC into defeat, but tired in final quarter. YENOC set pace and weakened, after a half.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:32½. Winner, Mrs. R. Chambers' ch. g. (3), by Sun God II—Erin's Bride. Trained by E. Davidson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:04 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ERIN'S SUN, $22.10, $9.80, $6.30; SCUDDER, $15.40, $8.30; GLITTERING, $8.50.

ERIN'S SUN, taken back after going forwardly, came to outside for final drive and with belated rush was up in final strides. SCUDDER, rated while close to pace, took command and closed willingly, but could not resist winner. GLITTERING worked his way to contention, but hung through stretch.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Bowie.

Washington's hope for the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap, John A. Manfuso's Aneroid, leaves Monday for California along with Pompoon. Owner Manfuso and Trainer Dian Kerr decided to give the son of The Porter a chance at the big purse. This is Aneroid's fourth year and he will be sent to the stud soon. His handlers feel that he has earned his way and deserves a crack at the rich prize. Firethorn left Pimlico yesterday for Kentucky, where he will go into stud service for C. V. Whitney. Nick Wall, who won the Bowie Handicap with Esposa, has given George Odom first call on his services for this meeting. The Millsdale Stable shipped six horses to Florida in charge of Bob Robertson. Horsemen were shocked to learn of the sudden death in Baltimore of Jim Thompson, E. R. Bradley's trainer. Jockey Harry Richards left today for California. The scribes dodged the new press box here because the bench was too high for typewriting. Bowie offers a good week-end program, topped by the Prince Georges Handicap. Full fields are named for each of the seven events, and they should be good betting races. There isn't a real standout horse in any of the events. BILL.

First race—Heraldic has shown much improvement in recent racing and, while I would prefer a longer route, I believe this one has class enough to get home. Room Service breaks off the rail and is dangerous. Annino raced greenly last out, and with education is a possible surprise.

Second race—Soigne may find this field the right one. Breaks from the outside, but has the speed to overcome that position. I'm going to string along. La Rose has some good races and will make a good bid to get out of the maiden ranks here. Star Mint is bred for the track and is dangerous.

Third race—Ashen may be best in this cheap field. Packs a lot of weight, but has favored this course in the past. Passing Eve is a fair sort and should be prominent in a field as cheap as this. Shot and Shell for the show end.

Fourth race—Timber Lady has had a rest since those hard races at Laurel and should like this course. I'm going to try to make the half-mile queen get home in front. Fast Express and Honey Cloud to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Jean Bart turned in a smashing race last out and seems nicely placed in the day's feature. She has the stretch punch, and I believe she will be up in time. Masked General demonstrated speed at Pimlico, but we must gamble on him running out at the turns. Clingendaal to hold the others safe.

Sixth race — Tenace had poor racing luck last out and seems to be headed for a set of brackets in the event he gets clear sailing. Patchpocket sprinted excellently at the other course and may surprise at this route. Ronfalon for the show. If muddy, I'll take Building Trades.

Seventh race—Mothel gets the call in the day's finale. Likes the marathon route and just missed in that recent outing. Secret Vote gets in light and is a threat. Dormido has performed excellently over this course.

Best bet—Ashen.

Wheat Jumps On Crop Havoc In Argentina

Maximum Rise of 5 Cents a Bushel Follows Big Export Demand.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Paralleling Argentina's crop disaster in 1924 that ultimately ran prices up 60 cents, sensational Argentine frost damage reports hoisted wheat today the immediate allowable limit.

Big export business in North American wheat resulted, as well as 5 cents a bushel limit jumps of prices both in United States and Canadian markets, with Liverpool wheat quotations showing at one stage a rise of almost 7 cents. Late estimates were that 3,000,000 bushels of wheat from the United States and Canada had been bought today for shipment to Europe, most of it United States wheat.

In addition to advices of startling sudden losses by frost in Argentina, root-rot and yellow stripe rust were reported today to have curtailed 1937 Argentine wheat production as much as 75,000,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 3⅛ to 4 cents higher compared with Wednesday's finish, December, 92⅜@⅞; May, 92⅞@93; July, 87¾@⅞; corn, ⅛ to 1 cent down; December, 55⅛@¼; May, 58¼@⅜; July, 59⅜; oats, ⅛@⅝ off; December, 30⅝, and rye showing 1⅝@2½ bulge; December, 73¾. Provisions scored 7 to 15 cents advance.

5 in Detroit Sentenced For Stock Frauds

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that five individuals, convicted of violating the securities act of 1933 and the mail fraud and conspiracy statutes in the sale of stock of R. Cummins & Co., Inc., have been sentenced to terms totaling 19 years, and fined $10,000 each by Judge Arthur F. Lederle, of the United States District Court of Michigan.

Edward A. Attix and Harry H. Landay were sentenced to five years each; Leonard E. Brown, to three years; Frank R. Lane, to four years, and Samuel Lafata to two years. The defendants are all residents of Detroit.

Brazil Issues Drop Abruptly

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—The rapid-fire change in the Brazilian government and the subsequent decree suspending service on external loans caused a sharp decline in that country's securities here today.

Brazilian Traction shares fell $4.75 to finish at $12.75, after having sold lower during the curb exchange session. Bond issues also were down, although volume of trading was not large. Hardest hit were the government 8 per cent bonds of 1941, which dropped $11.80 per $100 face value at $26.12; Brazilian Central Railway & Electric 7s, down $9.62 at $21, and the government 6½s of 1926-27, off $9.50 at $19.87.

The market in Brazilian coffee futures, which had already dropped when government price control was suspended and a cut was announced in the export tax on coffee several days ago, was less disturbed. Contracts for both Rio and Santos futures ranged in a field from .03 of a cent a pound higher to .07 of a cent lower. Losses of the early part of the day were considerably cut by closing time.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabout. They will be 120-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches thereof up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Argentina's Exports Highest on Record

Buenos Aires, Nov. 12.—Argentina's exports for the first ten months of this year were the highest ever recorded in the country's history, amounting to 16,322,000 tons valued at 2,032,167,000 pesos ($677,-400,000). The tonnage represents an increase of 43.5 per cent above last year's corresponding figure of 11,-371,000 tons, while the value showed a 57.7 per cent rise over the ten months' exports of 1936 which amounted to 1,288,671,000 pesos ($429,570,000).

Steel Output Falls to 41%, 28-Month Low

Failure of Auto Demand to Develop Surprises the Industry.

New York, Nov. 12.—"Steel ingot production has declined to 41 per cent, the lowest rate since July, 1935, when the month's total represented 38.86 per cent of the country's capacity, and steel scrap, at an average price of $13.50 a ton, has dropped to the lowest figure since July, 1936," says Iron Age today in its weekly summary, which continues:

'Only in a few districts is steel production holding at above the average for the country. The Pittsburgh district is down to 34 per cent, the Chicago district to 36 per cent, the Ohio Valleys 40 per cent, the Cleveland-Lorain area 37 per cent and Buffalo 32 per cent. The Wheeling-Weirton district, although 4 points below its rate last week, is at 68 per cent; the South is holding at 49 per cent, while the Detroit plants are averaging 85 per cent. Some individual plants are entirely idle and will operate only as sufficient orders can be accumulated for economical rollings.

"Further reduction of pig iron production is also in process. In the Chicago district three merchant furnaces have been withdrawn from blast.

Large Ford Order.

"Whether the bottom of the production decline has been reached can only be determined now from week to week on the basis of incoming business, which in the past week has fallen off generally, notwithstanding the receipt by U. S. Steel subsidiaries of orders for 25,000 tons of structural steel and 20,000 tons of bearing piles for a new press shop to be built by Ford Motor Co.

"Miscellaneous steel buying is in small volume as consumers and jobbers work toward the liquidation of their inventories. The failure of the automobile industry to buy in the expected volume for the manufacture of 1938 models is, however, the most surprising element in the present situation to the steel companies, which had evidently underestimated the amount of steel inventories carried over from the 1937 model season. There is still hope of an early improvement in automotive buying, based on somewhat better sales results at the Chicago automobile show than were obtained at the New York show, through this optimism is tempered somewhat by the fear of further labor troubles in the automobile industry, such as that which broke out in the Hudson plant on Tuesday.

"Strike votes were taken at two other plants, then rescinded. The United Auto Workers Union will hold a strategy conference this week-end. Barring strikes, motor car production probably will swing above 100,000 cars a week as Ford gets into stride, but the Ford plants are said to be well stocked with steel from its own mills."

Prime Industrials Higher; Rails and Utilities Lower

Wall Street Sentiment Improves With More Encouraging Advices From Washington; Brazilian Issues Break.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Nov. 12.—Selected industrial stocks held most of the buying attention in today's market, favorites climbing as much as 4 points or so in a few instances. While modest gains were in the majority at the finish of an exciting session, there was an assortment of losers among steels, motors, rails and utilities.

Wall Street sentiment, on the whole, continued to display improvement as dispatches from Washington indicated "something" was going to be done, and soon, to bring about a measure of convalescence to the rather sickly business and industrial patients.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retained a gain of .3 of a point, at 48.6. Transfers totaled 1,881,730 shares, compared with 1,923,650 last Wednesday.

Building construction stocks were buoyed by signs the Administration may inaugurate a huge housing campaign to brace waning employment.

Motors slipped as another drop in production was registered, the week's output falling under 1936 for the first time since early August. Last week's freight loadings were again down more than seasonally, and carrier issues turned in a listless performance.

Dollar Higher.

A further decline in leading foreign currencies in terms of the dollar was reflected in a receding London gold price in relation to the American monetary unit. Gold mining issues, coincidentally, extended their retreat.

Most commodities were inclined to do better. Wheat at Chicago jumped 3½ to 4 cents a bushel on word the Argentine crop may have suffered from severe frost damage. Corn was off ⅛ to 1. Cotton advanced 45 to 65 cents a bale.

Shares prominent on the upside included Johns-Manville at 84, U. S. Gypsum, 66¼; Celotex, 28; Certain-teed, 8⅝; Allied Chemical, 168; Westinghouse, 103⅞; duPont, 123; American Can, 90¼; Sears Roebuck, 67; National Steel, 66; American Radiator, 14¼; J. I. Case, 100; International Harvester, 70, and Superheater, 28¾.

Lower were U. S. Steel at 59½, General Motors, 40; Chrysler, 69¾; U. S. Rubber, 28½; American Telephone, 150; Kennecott, 35⅛; Continental Oil, 32; Dome Mines, 45⅝; N. Y. Central, 20½; Southern Pacific, 21¾, and Allis Chalmers, 47.

Brazilian Bonds Weak.

Brazilian issues, in the first day of trading since the Vargas coup d'etat, broke precipitously today on the bond market, following the announcement of suspension of payment on foreign obligations.

Brazilian Government 8s were 11⅛ lower at 26⅛. The 6½s were down 8¾ at 20, while the Brazilian Central Railway & Electric 7s, at 21, were down 9⅝.

Other foreign loans also broke sharply. Japan 5½s were down 2⅛ at 65½, and the 6½s were off 1½ at 77. Italian 7s broke 3 points to 73. Rome 6½s were 1⅛ lower at 62, while Milan 6½s were off 1¼ at 60.

U. S. Government obligations were steady to slightly lower, with gains ranging up to 6-32 of a point and losses held to 2-32 to 3.32.

Domestic corporate issues were mixed to slightly higher. The Associated Press average of 20 rails advanced .3 of a point to 75, while 10 industrials were .3 of a point higher at 98, and 10 utilities stood at 93.2, up .4.

Advances of a point or more registered in Alleghany 5s, at 67; American Typefounders, at 109; Rock Island General 4s, at 21, and Erie 5s, at 47.

France Cuts Rate To Three Per Cent

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP).—Easy money and the return of capital to France led the Bank of France today to reduce its discount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent. The bank' weekly statement showed more than 500,000,000 francs more bank notes had been put in circulation, while the gold coverage for the notes dropped only slightly. Exchange experts said the equalization fund was in a position "stronger than it has ever been." They said the bank "must have purchased nearly $100,000,000" and the market was now sufficiently bulwarked to lower discount rates.

Bob Burns Says—

I was just thinkin' today how true that old sayin' is that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." If you just trace your big troubles back, you'll find that they started from some little faults that coulda been cleared up in a minute if you'd just caught it in time.

I had an uncle that had to go to the hospital for repairs and when he came to, he got to meditatin' over the events that led up to his bein' there. He traced it back to the time he had a bad corn that pained him and to kill the pain he took to drink.

The drink caused him to go home and start an argument with his wife and she come back at him with a rollin' pin and put him in the hospital. Well sir, when my uncle got up, he went straight to a doctor and had the corn removed and to this day they've lived a happy, peaceful life.

3 Men Confess To Kidnaping Ex-Dry Leader

West Virginia Cleric Flees After 11 Days; $50,000 Sought by Trio.

United States Commissioner Charles F. Steed. They were held under $50,000 bond each for the Federal grand jury.

No Ransom Paid.

Dr. Seder escaped from his abductors and was found Thursday wandering, bruised and exhausted on a hillside in Wayne County. He disappeared November 1.

Hoover said last night the State would prefer kidnaping charges against all three.

No money was paid for Seder's release, the F. B. I. director said, despite the demand in the ransom note for $50,000 "if you want your father back alive."

The note was addressed and delivered to the two sons of the former missionary. One of the sons, Willard Seder, an official of the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Rankin (Pa.) plant, said he was "not at liberty" to discuss the case, according to an Associated Press Dispatch. Arthur Seder, the other son, is a railroad official at St. Paul, Minn.

Booth Admits Complicity.

"The matter of prime concern to my brother and me is that we have our father back and his chances of surviving are excellent," Willard Seder stated.

Hoover said Booth admitted to Federal agents that he had participated in the abduction of Dr. Seder and in writing a $50,000 ransom letter November 6.

Hoover said Dr. Seder was kidnaped by three men when he agreed to accompany them to assist in cashing a check.

The one-time head of the West Virginia Anti-Saloon League was found near a cave in a lonely wooded section 25 miles from Huntington by a farmer who heard him groaning.

Both Eyes Blackened.

Dr. Glenn Johnson, of nearby Wayne, gave emergency treatment and said both of Seder's eyes had been blackened, apparently by blows. Albert Rank, who found Dr. Seder, said he told him he had been kidnaped and held captive, an Associated Press story related.

At the time Dr. Seder disappeared, Dr. Edward F. Reaser, psychiatrist of the Huntington State Hospital, said he believed the minister might have been suffering from a psychosis which sent him into hiding.

Water Firm Withdraws Plea Against Holding Act

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission announced yesterday it had permitted the Federal Water Service Corporation of New York City to withdraw its plea against being classified as a holding company under the public utility holding company act of 1935.

The company said that since its application for exemption it had acquired certain securities of Alabama Gas Co. and Huntsville Gas Co., through Southern Natural Gas Co., a subsidiary.

Accused Kidnapers and Victim

Eyebrows Lifted Over New Names At Ampitheater

Eyebrows were raised yesterday at Arlington National Cemetery over the resolution of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to oppose the placing of the names of any Confederate heroes on the memorial amphitheater unless the name of Jefferson Davis is included.

This, said officials, was the first they had heard that anybody was planning to add any names to those already on the amphitheater. Additions, they said, would have to be authorized by act of Congress. Document clerks at the Capitol were unable yesterday to find any pending bills or resolutions to put Confederate names on the amphitheater.

However the U. D. C. at its Richmond convention yesterday, unanimously adopted the recommendation of Mrs. Richard A. Allen, president of the District of Columbia division, and of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, to insist on the inclusion of President Davis' name.

W. F. Van Swaringen, divisional commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and president of the Confederate Memorial Association, said while proposals to put the names of Generals Lee and Jackson on the memorial had been "agitated," nothing definite had been done about them.

Van Swaringen observed that since the name of Lincoln does not appear on the amphitheater he did not see how the U. D. C. could reasonably insist on having Davis' name there.

Mothers Spur Hunt for Girls And 2 Bandits

Holdup Victim Finds Pair Given Ride Like Photos of D. C. Travelers.

Police last night redoubled their efforts to find two missing Central High School girls, believed unwittingly to have hitch hiked a ride with a pair of escaped convicts in a stolen car, when their mothers made frantic appeals for action and the girls were identified tentatively by the salesman from whom the car was stolen.

The girls, Velma Tomlin, 14, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Tomlin, of 1932 Calvert street northwest, and Leona Greer, 17, daughter of Mrs. Hazel Osborne, of 1323 Sheridan street northwest, were reported missing November 3.

Wednesday two girls answering their descriptions appeared briefly as hitch hikers near Laurel, Md., and disappeared again before the automobile in which they were given a ride reached Baltimore.

John C. Gouldman, 25, an automobile salesman, of 900 Crittenden street, told police here he was held up and robbed of his automobile, his money and most of his clothing about six miles north of Laurel. Before the bandits released him, he said, the girls had been given a lift by them.

Yesterday Gouldman identified tentatively photographs of the girls and of Irving Limper and John E. Carson, convicts escaped from the Maryland State Prison Farm near Hagerstown, and believed to have robbed the salesman.

The two men, in Gouldman's car but without the two girls, later held up Melvin Duley, 23, in Baltimore and robbed him of $2. Duley furnished the license number of the car operated by the holdup men, which tallied with Gouldman's.

Although Gouldman was unable to make positive identification of the girls through photographs, he said the hitch hikers were about the same ages as the Washington girls. He said he was in the back seat of the car at the time and because of the darkness, his distance from them and his own distracted state, was able to form no definite impression of their appearances.

After the girls were reported missing from home here, police were told they turned up at the home of the grandfather of one of them at Anton Va., and were taken by him to Charlottesville, Va., and turned over to the station agent with fares to Washington.

Police agents testified they arrested 17 men in the Fourteenth street establishment after a specially deputized policeman had been sent there to place a bet. The agent testified he had wagered $2 on a horse on the date mentioned in the warrant but had made numerous other bets.

A determined bid to have the seven men admitted to bail pending the outcome of an appeal for a new trial was made by Attorneys Harry T. Whelan, William B. Gallagher and William O'Connell. They claimed there was a serious question of law involved in the appeal, since they have maintained from the outset that the search warrant on which the place was raided was based on the terms of the espionage act, which relates generally to Federal law violations, while it should have been based on specific District law violations.

Justice Adkins said he would follow the usual procedure and order the defendants committed to the District Jail pending the outcome of a request for a new trial, which the attorneys said they planned to file early next week.

Pending, meantime, are several score cases arising from the smashing blows aimed at the gaming fraternity. Included in those awaiting trial is William Dietz, who with 31 others was indicted on a charge of conspiring to violate the gaming laws. Dietz, otherwise known as Abe Plisco, was arrested after Federal agents had tapped the wires of a sumptuous suite of rooms in the Albee Building and had learned the office was being used for a clearing house for the dissemination of race track information.

Dietz and his alleged aides were arrested when the agents allegedly heard them relay track information to places where it was suspected bets on the horses were being taken. Shortly after the first raid, Dietz reopened his place, claiming then he had a right to send his information out to barber shops, poolrooms and the like.

Jail Breaker Is Doomed For Killing 2 Policemen

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 12 (AP).—Edward P. Simpson, 39-year-old jailbreaker, today was convicted of murder in the first degree for shooting to death Patrolmen Henry C. Bell and Lawrence E. Murphy of Newton. The conviction carries a mandatory sentence of death in the electric chair. The shooting occurred August 21 when Simpson's car was stopped for a minor traffic rule violation.

Sanitary Store Strike Throws 1,300 Off Jobs

No Settlement in Sight; Pickets Ask Customers Not to Buy.

No settlement was in sight last night for the strike which yesterday kept from their jobs 1,300 of the 1,445 clerks, butchers and meat cutters of Sanitary Grocery Stores in Washington and vicinity—and approximately 150 employes of the chain in Richmond.

Store officials refused to comment, other than to say they had managed to keep most of the units open and that they were as yet unable to estimate the strike's effect on sales.

A. F. of L. groups which called the strike termed it "100 per cent effective," said the company had refused to discuss the matter with their representatives, and that today all picket lines in front of the 300 stores would be considerably strengthened.

Unless a satisfactory agreement is reached over the week-end, employes of the American stores will join the strike Monday, organizers predicted.

The grocery groups are asking union recognition, a 51-hour week, time and a half for overtime, vacations with pay, a base pay of $21 weekly, and seniority in layoffs and appointments.

Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel is leading a committee which will determine whether the League of Women Shoppers will support the strike. She said last night that the investigation of her group will be continued today.

"We have not been able to reach a decision," she said.

Several calls were recevied at Washington police precincts in connection with the strike, but for the most part they were from outsiders who wished to know the cause for congregation of small groups in front of stores.

Industrialist Urges Labor Act Junking

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12 (AP).—E. Kent Hubbard, of Middletown, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, declared today the Wagner labor relations act "ought to be scrapped just as the NRA was scrapped."

Hubbard said, in an address at the association's annual meeting, where he was re-elected president for his twenty-eighth successive year:
